DES Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration disclosed Friday it will propose a public hearing on the controversial livestock drug DES which has been illegally invading the nation's meat supply at an increasing rate despite tighter curbs.

The agency said it will propose a formal ban on diethylstilbestrol next week, the only way it can legally invite a hearing.

"It is apparent that additional action must be taken," FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said. But the government is not convinced a total ban is the answer.

The hormone, fed to about 25 million steers annually to speed weight gain with less feed, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals. It also has been linked to vaginal cancers in a small group of young women whose mothers took the drug during pregnancy to prevent miscarriages.

Agricultural economists have estimated that a total DES ban would boost consumer meat prices about $3.85 per person annually.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who introduced a bill last November to ban DES in animal feed, called the FDA's action feeble. He described it as "another tardy step down a road that must lead to a complete ban if the national interest is to be served."

In the House, Rep. William J. Scherle, R-Iowa, introduced legislation which would protect the use of a cancer-causing animal drug if scientific tests showed that the amount or the form of residues in meat were not carcinogenic.

The Delaney amendment to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act prohibits even trace amounts of any carcinogenic food additives. That provision led to the ban of the artificial sweetener cyclamate.

Commissioner Edwards said a public hearing would focus on alternatives to a total DES ban: possible additional controls, withholding or discarding all livers from steers and sheep fed the drug, availability of other growth-promoting compounds and restrictions to implants rather than feed additives.

The government first allowed voluntary certification by livestock producers that their animals were free of DES, then early this year it required mandatory certification and extended from two days to seven days withdrawal from DES before marketing.

UMW Supervision

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Friday ordered a new election of top officers of the United Mine Workers and imposed what sources said was probably the toughest federal control over a labor union in the nation's history.

U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant ordered the elections held before the end of this year and gave Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson virtually complete control over union affairs until after the vote.

Judge Bryant earlier had nullified the union's 1969 election after a trial in which the government charged widespread violations.

The court order brought a one-sentence response from the union, calling it "dictatorial."

It was hailed, however, as "a fine order" by Joseph A. "Chip" Yablonski, attorney for the rebel Miners for Democracy.

It was Yablonski's father, Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, who was murdered after trying to oust Mine Workers President W. A. "Tony" Boyle in the 1969 election.

Bryant, who nullified Boyle's 1969 election victory, gave the secretary of Labor power to place representatives in all union offices from international headquarters down to the local level, and authorized Miners for Democracy to put observers in all union offices.

Bryant gave the Labor Department veto power over all union financial dealings, including hiring and pay raises, and forbade any union officer or employee from donating any money to any union political candidate.

"The order is so dictatorial that the union is apprehensive about commenting on it," said the union.

The government had charged in the election trial that Boyle's 1969 campaign received union funds, including pay raises for officials who contributed to his campaign and misuse of expense accounts.

The Labor Department said it will supervise the voting among the approximately 180,000 union members in some 22 states. Ballot boxes will be sealed by government agents and brought to Washington for counting, a spokesman said.

Boyle and other union officers will remain in office until the outcome of the new election, but under the strict supervision of the Labor Department and federal courts.

Convention Security

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A security force of some 4,000 including game wardens, is being mustered as city officials brace themselves for an influx of nondelegates during the two national political conventions.

The force is being put together in anticipation of a crowd that officials estimate could number anywhere from 50,000 to 250,000 persons.

Gov. Reubin Askew has assigned 3,000 National Guardsmen to be on duty during the Democratic convention which starts July 10 and the Republican gathering which begins Aug. 21.

Askew said the guardsmen would be stationed in the Miami area as part of their normal summer training but would be "available on short notice in the event they are needed to assist law enforcement personnel assigned to the conventions."

The National Guardsmen will join a special riot squad of 400 state employees, including men from the Game and Fresh Water Commission and the Marine Patrol.

Police Chief Rocky Pomerance will control the riot squad along with his own 250 Miami Beach policemen and a contingent of 200 men from the Miami police force and the Dade County Public Safety Department.

Don Pride, Askew's press secretary, said Friday another 100 members of the state Department of Law Enforcement would work with the U.S. Secret Service.

Pride said federal backup forces were expected to be available.

Seek Tighter Airport Security

Pilots Plan 24-Hour Halt

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty thousand of the world's airline pilots said Friday they would refuse to fly for 24 hours on Monday in an attempt to halt air traffic in 64 nations as a demonstration for tighter airport security against hijackers.

The pilots announced their plans Friday morning. By late afternoon, however, there were two court moves against the planned stoppage and one blocking set of pilots.

Trans World Airlines obtained a temporary federal court order banning the proposed strike by its pilots.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Air Transport Association asked the federal district court for an overall order keeping all American pilots in their cockpits. The strike deadline is 2 a.m. EDT Monday. And in still another development, the nation's largest group of pilots, United Air Lines' staff of 6,000, said they do not plan to support the proposed 24-hour international strike, saying it would serve no purpose.

The TWA no-strike order by U.S. District Court Judge Edward Weinfeld in Manhattan is due for a hearing Tuesday. In Washington, District court Judge George Hart scheduled a hearing on the Air Transport Association suit for Saturday at 11 a.m.

Both TWA and the ATA said they were in full sympathy with the pilots' efforts to halt sky-jackings but that they were opposed to the one-day grounding of planes because it was against public interest.

The demonstration against domestic and international airlines was described by President Ola Forsberg, of the International Federation of Airline Pilots.

Forsberg's announcement followed what he termed an "unsatisfactory" response from the United Nations to the federation's plea that the U.N. (Turn To Page Six) (See "Pilots")

McGovern Says His Welfare Plans Would Hit Rich Hardest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern said Friday his welfare plans involve substantial new taxes for the rich and declared his proposed military budget is so powerful it leaves no room for "white flags of surrender."

McGovern, currently front runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, said his proposed cut of military spending to $54 billion by 1975 still will leave the nation so powerful it could destroy every major target in the Soviet Union and China simultaneously and 10 times over.

Referring to the recent "white flag" criticism made of his proposed military budget, McGovern told the congressional Joint Economic Committee:

"This is not a surrender budget. It is a very powerful budget. There's no white flag involved..."

"The truth is," McGovern said, "that we will have no new national priorities unless we make drastic changes in today's military spending trends."

McGovern was invited to testify before the Senate-House panel as one of a series of Democratic presidential contenders who have offered varying proposals on taxes, defense, welfare, unemployment and the economy.

Among political happenings elsewhere:

McGovern suggested several times in his session with congressmen that his proposal for a taxable $1,000 grant to all citizens as part of an income maintenance plan is subject to modification.

He said increased taxes on the rich and the corporations would be needed.

He denied that $210 billion is the correct price tag to apply to the total cost of his program and pledged that the team of economists working with him will have realistic price tags soon.

The McGovern plan would repeal the present $750 income tax exemption and replace it with a $1,000 grant for everybody.

McGovern denied that most of the cost of his system would be borne by the middle classes earning between $12,000 to $20,000 a year.

"So this silly statement about giving $1,000 to Gov. Rockefeller and Howard Hughes is just that," McGovern said.

"They're going to pay more under the McGovern system and they know it... Above $20,000 there would be an appreciable increase," he said, "with the real bite coming at above $50,000."

U.S. Warplanes Rake North Viet Positions

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes raked North Vietnam's southern section Friday, a day after a record 350 air strikes hit three MIG air bases, a naval base and an army barracks, military sources said.

For the second successive day, the U.S. fighter-bombers stayed away from the Hanoi area as a precaution against any incidents while Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny is visiting the North Vietnamese capital. Details of the latest raids were withheld.

A communique from the U.S. Command reported that the northernmost strike Thursday was against the Ninh Binh railroad and highway bridge, about 60 miles south of Hanoi.

Nearly all the raids were confined to an area between the 17th Parallel demarcation line and the 20th Parallel. The 20th Parallel is about 200 miles north of the demilitarized zone dividing North and South Vietnam, and 75 miles south of Hanoi.

The main targets were three MIG air bases at Bai Thuong, Khe Phat and Quan Lang.

"We have effectively stopped MIG activity at these three bases," said an Air Force officer.

The American fighter-bombers ranged up and down the coast to the 20th Parallel, attacking supply trucks, cutting highways and smashing bridges, warehouses and storage depots.

In another big raid, Navy pilots from the carrier Midway attacked the Hai Yen naval base six miles northeast of Vinh on the Song Ca River and reported damaging one pier and destroying two supply craft. Vinh is about 125 miles inside North Vietnam.

Radio Hanoi claimed that despite the air blows, supplies are flowing to the front.

The United States began phasing out one of its last two remaining combat infantry brigades in South Vietnam.

The headquarters of the 196th Infantry Brigade, based at Da Nang, and two of its battalions began deactivating. More fighter-bombers from the Da Nang air base were shifted to bases in Thailand to continue the U.S. air campaign in Indochina.

The moves are aimed at reducing U.S. troop levels in Vietnam from the present 61,900 to 49,000 during the next two weeks, as ordered by President Nixon under the Vietnamization program.

But the Nixon administration has built up a force of nearly 100,000 men at bases in Thailand, Guam, Taiwan and aboard 7th Fleet ships. They provide the South Vietnamese with a massive air and naval umbrella.

The only other U.S. ground combat unit remaining in South Vietnam is the 3rd Brigade of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, providing security for the Saigon-Long Binh-Hoa military complex.

As of now there are perhaps 3,000 frontline fighters remaining in Vietnam.

Battlefield action on the three major fronts at An Loc, in the central highlands and along the northernmost defense line at My Chanh above Hue was light and scattered.

An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, has been under siege since April 7.

Irvings Draw Prison Terms For Fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — Clifford Irving, the swinging literary swindler, was sentenced to 2½ years in federal prison Friday for defrauding McGraw-Hill Inc. of $750,000 by means of his fake autobiography of Howard Hughes. His wife got two months.

Irving, 41, also was fined $10,000 on his plea of guilty to the federal conspiracy indictment. Following a plea for mercy that brought him to the verge of tears, he stood with hand on his head and heard himself described as a winner with the women, but in other respects "the biggest loser I know."

His pretty, blonde wife, Edith, 36, wept as she sought leniency from Federal Judge John Cannella, vowing that despite her husband's international philandering, "I will stay with him."

Cannella gave Mrs. Irving a suspended two-year sentence plus two months in jail. He tempered the punishment further by delaying her husband's sentence until Aug. 28 so he can care for their small children while she is in jail.

Cannella also fined Mrs. Irving $10,000.

"The sentence that I have given is less than I thought would be at the outset," Cannella, who could have husband and wife each. (Turn To Page Six) (See "Irvings")

Dead Brain Now Proof Of Death

Four years and a day after surgeons removed Bruce O. Tucker's heart, and gave it to another human being, a jury ruled that Tucker really was dead when the operation was performed.

The case arose on May 25, 1968, when physicians at the Medical College of Virginia declared Tucker dead and a transplant team led by Drs. David Hume and Richard Lower used his heart for the world's 19th human heart transplant.

Tucker, a 54-year-old laborer, had suffered massive brain damage in an accident. But his brother William claimed in court that the donor was alive when his heart was removed, that machines were maintaining the man's classic life signs—breathing and circulation.

Medical witnesses, however, held that Tucker had been dead for several hours by the brain death definition.

The seven-man jury agreed that a man whose brain is dead is truly dead. With this decision they formally reaffirmed what physicians have been saying for several years: In the case of an individual whose heart and breathing are being artificially maintained it is the brain that best determines whether a human life still exists.

The only reason the jury could make such a decision was that Judge A. Christian Compton told the jury it could heed either the classical definition of death or the more recent brain death criteria. The judge's instructions were historic—it was the first time in any court of law that the brain death definition was used. And the fact that the jury accepted it completely meant that they agreed that death is basically a medical concept, not a legal one.

The judge and jury had, in effect, agreed to the existence of a dichotomy of death, the possibility that both the brain and the heart—depending on the circumstance—can be the crucial criterion.

Dr. Henry Beecher of Harvard University, who has been one of the pioneers of the concept of brain death, was pleased by the Virginia court decision, but said he thought the concept ought to be "dignified by law."

Dr. William Curran, professor of legal medicine at Harvard, also agreed that statutes governing the definition of death "are absolutely necessary to protect doctors and enable them to save lives."

In fact, two states, Kansas and Maryland, now have laws on the books which establish two alternative "definitions of death." These are the permanent absence of breathing and heart-beat, and the permanent absence of spontaneous brain activity.

According to the Kansas statute the specific criteria for making the determinations are left to "ordinary standards of medical practice."

Some, however, have asked, "Why the rush?" to formulate statutory law, for this type of law can be confusing, imprecisely drafted or overly rigid. These individuals believe that current laws and regulations are sufficiently flexible.

But, according to Harvard's Dr. Curran, this doesn't make much sense. It would be, he says, "like letting speed laws be established by lawsuits resulting from crashes."

Pact Against Terrorism

An international agreement just ratified unanimously by the Senate is a welcome response to the problem of terrorist attacks on diplomats which has been so manifest in recent times. By removing crimes of this kind from the category of "political offenses," the United States and other nations signing the pact make it much more likely that the terrorists will be punished.

There have been numerous instances of politically motivated terrorism—assault, kidnapping, murder—against diplomats over the past three years. Many have occurred in the Western Hemisphere, and nine involved U.S. officials. In some cases, asylum or difficulties in extraditing criminals have thwarted justice.

The intent of the new pact is to expose terrorists to punitive sanctions, depriving them of the special treatment accorded those charged with "political offenses." This promises to put a crimp in a nasty form of international crime.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I'm fed up with talking about crab grass. Let's talk about something RELEVANT. Like MULCH!"

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's super envoy for secret and not-so-secret missions, is heading for Peking under cover of a barebones announcement that has raised more questions than answers.
With Soviet President Nikolai

V. Podgorny en route to Hanoi, word of Kissinger's departure late Thursday or early Friday spurred speculation of a new Vietnam peace move.
White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler publicly denied any link between Kissinger's trip to Peking, his fourth, and Podgorny's journey. And he said the Nixon strategist plans no side trips or meetings with non-Chinese representatives during his talks with Peking leaders June 19-23.

But the White House spokesman left wide open the probability that Vietnam will at least be discussed, as did the brief joint announcement of Kissinger's visit issued Wednesday here and in Peking.

Kissinger is going, it said, "for concrete consultations with Chinese leaders to further the normalization of relations between the People's Republic of China and the United States and continue to exchange views on issues of common interest."
Kissinger's first, secret journey to China last July set up Nixon's summit session seven months later. He led an advance team to Peking in October and accompanied Nixon there in February. Meanwhile he went on a series of secret trips to Paris for Vietnam negotiations. Those trips were disclosed in January.

The presidential aide's five-man entourage this time includes a Vietnam specialist, John D. Negroponte, along with China experts. Yet Ziegler said "I would not relate it (the trip) to any particular topic."

Administration sources ruled out Nixon's new mining and bombing of North Vietnam as prompting the parley, despite Peking's charge Monday that the air raids threatened China's security.

They said the Kissinger visit was agreed on last month, and that Peking could have canceled it if the Chinese intended to follow up their anti-U.S. rhetoric with tough deeds.

And Podgorny's call at Hanoi, the sources said, had been expected as the Kremlin reports to its allies on the U.S.-Soviet summit. The United States has held similar sessions with its allies, including Kissinger's just-concluded trip to Japan.

Nonetheless these administration sources are not discouraging speculation that Peking and Moscow might be prevailed upon to influence Hanoi toward a peace settlement. They say:

—Both the Chinese and the Soviets have shown Vietnam is a secondary issue with them, running below their other priorities including their dispute with each other.

—North Vietnam is hard hit by Nixon's seal-off and bombing measures. Because Chinese and Russian supplies are choked down, Hanoi may be more inclined to negotiate.

Other guesswork about Kissinger's mission suggests that the Peking meeting will pick up where Nixon's talks there left off, covering a broad range of topics from Taiwan to trade but not necessarily reaching much new agreement.

The February summit provided for visits by "a senior U.S. representative" from time to time. The U.S.-Chinese ambassadorial contacts set up in Paris in March are described as satisfactory, though they haven't produced much to date.

A Chinese table tennis team has visited the United States, and Peking is reported to be considering sending medical groups and more athletes. A small but increasing number of Americans has been allowed to visit China.

There is speculation too that Kissinger will be discussing some of the results of Nixon's Moscow talks. But, as one official put it, this topic must be treated delicately in Peking because of the deep animosity of the two communist giants toward each other.

Bandwagon Momentum

McGovern: His Rivals Fade

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
LOS ANGELES (NEA) — Sen. George McGovern's triple sweep over Sen. Hubert Humphrey in the California, New Jersey and New Mexico primaries gives him so much presidential nomination strength that it now seems unlikely anyone can stop him.

His delegate bag for the day could run as high as 370, including the 17 he won as an unopposed contender in his own state of South Dakota. He gets 271 on a winner-take-all basis in California, probably upwards of 70 out of 109 in New Jersey, nine or 10 in New Mexico.

McGovern's adversaries, not least Humphrey himself, are quick to note that the South Dakota's winning California percentage may prove to be less than half that which was suggested for him in a recent state poll. But presidential nominations are gained by amassing delegates, not by totaling up percentages.

Humphrey's fairly close showing in California may encourage him and his followers, plus others in the Democratic party who appear to have strong doubts about McGovern's electability in the fall against President Nixon.

Yet the hard reality of the delegate count is working for McGovern. NEA's periodic checks of the entire country have shown the senator to be on a sharply rising curve. These latest results only arch it higher toward 1,509 delegates needed for nomination at Miami Beach in July.

On top of that, NEA's newest survey provides preliminary indications of widespread, though little noticed, delegate gains for McGovern that may bring him unstoppable momentum.

More decisive still, the evidence suggests that Humphrey is losing some of the delegate potential indicated for him earlier and may this time end up with fewer delegates in prospect than when the last check was made some three weeks ago.

Humphrey, of course, gained nothing in California. He was wiped out in New Mexico because the disabled Gov. George Wallace ran second and thus shared the delegates with McGovern.

These events strongly underscore survey findings that suggest Humphrey is losing delegate prospects in groups of one to five in state after state.

To be sure, he is tough and resilient. He knows many of the Democratic governors who gathered at the National Governor's Conference at Houston have misgivings about McGovern. As an earlier column laid out, Humphrey's strategists offer a script that envisions his eventual triumph in the convention on a late ballot.

But McGovern's victories do heighten his bandwagon momentum, enhance previous questions about Humphrey's electability, and threaten the latter's chances of getting enough money to fight on at full pace.

Uncommitted delegates may begin to topple McGovern's way. Some tied only loosely to Sen. Edmund Muskie, like the 62 in Illinois, may quickly break and move to the still rising front-runner.

Psychological advantage does go with winning, especially when the victories come in unprecedented clusters of four as has just happened. The flaw in the Humphrey condition and strategy is that they have indeed been grievously damaged by the June 6 outcome, even though the valiant Minnesota senator plainly wants to fight on.

Ann Landers:

How To Make Sure Younger Son Will Grow Up To Be A Mess

Dear Ann Landers: I've noted that on occasion you print satirical "how to" columns. Since I am eminently qualified to give advice on this subject, I decided to write. My topic is How To Make Sure Your Younger Son Grows Up To Be A Mess.

1. Be disappointed that your second child wasn't a girl. After all, the first child was a boy, which pleased his father, so the second child should be a girl, so his mother will be pleased. This is what children are for.

2. Father: Devote all your time and attention to the first-born. Don't worry about ignoring the second son. I promise you his mother will make up for it.

3. Mother: Since Dad is a little tough on the second son (ignoring him and all), protect the boy as best you can. Be sure he doesn't come into contact with the cruel, hard world. A concerned mom can be a great shock absorber.

4. Father: Let your son know he's a sissy because he likes art, music and poetry. Any kid who can't bloody a few noses and be outstanding in sports should be ashamed of himself.

5. Mother: Be critical of every girl your son looks at. After all, your son deserves the best, so don't let him settle for less. A young fellow needs a mother's guidance these days. There are so many tramps around.

6. Father: Let your son know early that you consider him a failure. Compare him with his older brother frequently. If you recognize that the second boy is vastly inferior, be sure to mention it. Don't let people think you're so stupid you don't know the difference.

7. Be prepared for the unhappiness that comes with having a disturbed, maladjusted child. And have some answers ready—such as, "We can't understand it. We raised them the same way. It's something in the genes that makes some kids strange."—Born Second.

Dear Second Born: Now that you've decided where the blame lies, start working on the rest of your life. It began this morning.

Dear Ann Landers: We are a group of Winnipeg teenagers who wish to thank you for your forthright opinion on that weirdo-freak superstar who comes out loaded with jewelry, dressed like a dame and does this creepy number where she (?) chops off a doll's head and make-believe blood oozes all over the stage. The psycho hangs himself at the close of the act.

I'll bet you caught plenty of heat from the lunatics who think that lousy noise is right on. Too bad they don't recognize hysterical emotionalism for what it is.

Entertainment should leave an audience with a deeper appreciation for beauty. We object to groups that use cheap sensationalism and shock stuff to mask a lack of talent. American and Canadian teenagers should rebel against junk at ridiculous prices by organizing clubs to stamp out violence, perversion and creepy groups.

For a generation that claims to be against war, against pollution, and says it wants to save the environment, why not start by eliminating the garbage from our own lives? The lyrics to some of the biggest hits are so dirty, I'm sure the adults don't know what the words mean.

We're glad you had the courage to print that letter, Ann.—With You

Dear With: Thanks for writing. The mail ran 10 to one against us.

To Bring Soul To Classics

By STEFAN DONEV
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — James Frazier, the young black who was guest conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic last fall, is trying to bring soul to the classics and the classics to his soul brothers and sisters.

Frazier is writing, "Twelfth Street, A Soul Musical."

"West Side Story" was a landmark because it brought jazz, real jazz, to the stage. "Hair" did the same thing with acid rock," he said.

"In my 'Twelfth Street,' I had to come to grips with a philosophical as well as a musical problem. I want to bring rhythm and blues and gospel music within the formal structure of a symphony. And, I'd like it to be a landmark."

Frazier, 32, who conducted the Detroit Symphony on Thursday for the first time since he got rave reviews in the Soviet press for his Leningrad appearance, said a Hollywood studio is interested in his musical and he will spend two months in California soon to work on it.

"Now jazz and rhythm and blues and gospel and rock aren't the same thing at all," the Detroit-ghetto-raised musician said. "But R and B and gospel do go together. What I'm trying to do is what other composers, such as Brahms, did. They took the folk songs and the music of their culture and put them in a formalized structure."

Frazier, who earned a degree in chemistry but changed his mind about going to medical school, conducted Italy's La Scala Opera after winning first place in the Guido Cantelli International Conductors' Competition. He conducted orchestras in Detroit, Indianapolis, Los Angeles and Nashville, then was invited by the Soviet government to conduct at Leningrad. He was the youngest American and first black to conduct there.

Frazier said of his new work: "Twelfth Street" is the story of the street people leading up to the (1967) Detroit riot. But it's also about black life in the ghetto. It has a message, and I hope it's entertaining."

"When a character is introduced in music, there is a leitmotiv, or a recurring theme that can be identified with that character. But I'm trying to make it a soul leitmotiv."

"Now when the pimp comes on it's sort of a ... dip da-da-da op. When the nice girl comes on it's lovey-dovey, but with a little sashay on the backbeat."

Frazier is also trying to move the young black community with the classics.

"There is a lot of interest in good music among youth, and in the black community, more than most people think."

"But they have to know what it is, what it says. And, we're dealing with a sophisticated audience. You can't con them and simply say, 'It's good for you to hear this.' They want to understand it."

U.S. Antidrug Effort In Asia Faces Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American antidrug effort in Southeast Asia is troubled by a lack of intelligence, inadequate enforcement capabilities and the failure of some high local officials to realize narcotics is a serious regional problem, according to U.S. specialists.

But, even with these negative factors, the officials say the program is doing well, over-all, particularly in Thailand and Laos where large seizures of heroin have been reported and many drug factories closed.

"But we still don't have the intelligence system we need to trace drugs, and the local law officers aren't equipped to deal with the extent of the trafficking," one State Department expert said.

Another problem, the attitude of some local high-level authorities, is not so much a matter of corruption, he contended, as it is a reflection of an old situation that no longer exists.

"It used to be that a good deal of heroin was thought going to Americans in Vietnam," another official said. "That was never really the case, but with the cut-down of Americans in Vietnam it is less so now."

However, many Southeast Asian government leaders still think in terms of American usage—actually only about 5 to 10 per cent of the total—without fully realizing the major market for Asian-produced narcotics is among Asians, the U.S. experts said.

But U.S. officials say the non-chalance may be changing, particularly in Thailand and Laos in recent weeks.

A mobile strike force in Thailand made two large seizures worth several million dollars last week, officials say, and in Laos high-level military officers are hearing down hard on the traffic, which was legal until last November.

The situation isn't so bright in Burma, which is reluctant to fully participate in cooperative antidrug efforts for fear it will amount to an admission of inability to handle the problem. "It's the old story about a loss of face," one State Department source said.

There is a sense of urgency in dealing with Burma because the success of the Thai and Laotian drives have forced heroin producers to move their factories into Burma.

The U.S. part of the anti-narcotics efforts consists mainly of providing advisers, technical information, radios and other communications help.

FEMALE TERRORIST CO-LEADER NABBED AT HANNOVER

HANNOVER, Germany (AP) — Ulrike Meinhof, the female co-leader of West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang of anarchist terrorists, was arrested Friday at Hannover airport as she arrived on a flight from West Berlin, police sources reported.

They said she had a bomb in her cosmetic case and that a submachine gun, three revolvers, several magazines of bullets, and tools and materials for making bombs were in her luggage.

Andreas Baader, the gang's other leader, was captured in Frankfurt two weeks ago, and 14 of the other 22 hard-core members of the gang are reported in police custody.

The gang is accused of a recent wave of bombing attacks in which four U.S. soldiers were killed and 36 Americans and Germans were injured. The gang is also charged with a series of bank robberies, break-ins, car thefts and a plot to kidnap Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Mrs. Meinhof is 37, a former journalist and the mother of twin girls. The police sources said she was on her way to southern Germany when she was arrested.

WOUNDED CIVILIANS IN AN LOC await evacuation by helicopter Thursday. The U.S. Command reports American aircraft staged more than 340 air strikes inside North Vietnam Thursday. Under orders from Washington, warplanes will stay clear of the Hanoi area during the visit of Soviet President Podgorny.

YOUR BIRTHDAY AND HOROSCOPE

By STELLA WILDER

SATURDAY, JUNE 17—Born today, you are basically a practical person even though your major talents probably lie along artistic lines. You should not find it difficult to meld practicality with art, however; indeed, it is a combination that could well net you a small fortune even very early in your career, for it will enable you to turn to commercial uses the products of talent which has not been fully developed. Later, when artistic talent is fully blown, you should be able to create both fame and fortune for yourself.

An ambitious person, you nevertheless know how to keep your ambition well within the bounds of possibility. Not a dreamer when it comes to setting up goals for yourself, you know full well just what sort of time limits. More important, you know how to follow through on the matter of self-discipline so that you can keep to a workable schedule. You may come into your own later than some because you are not impulsive—but you will in the long run do better than most.

One who works at high-pressure levels, you are somewhat inclined to be very high strung, even nervous, when it comes to personal relationships. You manage to keep nerves under control when it is career matters which are at stake—but you find it next to impossible to keep your temper under wraps when it comes to your social life. For this reason, you may find friendships difficult to sustain.

To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

Sunday, June 18

GEMINI (May 22-June 21) — Just as you can be greatly encouraged by praise, so you can be just as greatly disturbed by adverse criticism. Try to avoid a meeting with your critics.

CANCER (June 22-July 23) — Take an intellectual interest in one who asked for your friendship. You may find that there is much about him or her that you've overlooked.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23) — The ordinary routine of a family Sunday leaves you cold today. Find something exciting to do—something that will allow you to express your real views.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23) — Generally open-minded and open-handed, you may find yourself making the selfish decision this morning. This self-interest may be good for a change.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) — Show another the warmth of your affection. These days it is difficult enough to feel close to a fellow human being without being unduly timid.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — An impulsive move this morning may spoil your plans for this Sunday afternoon. Be prepared to give plenty of time to the decision-making process.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) — Morning worship should leave you with a tremendous sense of well-being and contentment. Don't be surprised to find yourself mellowing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20) — Unless you are really sure that another deserves your help at this time, you will be wise not to offer it. Seek to make peace at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19) — Take care that in your desire to make a new friend you don't allow yourself to be imposed upon in a way you will later regret.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21) — The bare necessities will be well taken care of this morning even if you don't worry about them. Turn your attention to people, not things.

ACCUSED OF LACING HUSBAND'S SCOTCH WITH ANT POISON

GOSHEN, Ind. (UPI)—David and Shirley Rock seemingly were a happily married young couple, both involved in church and community affairs.

They were considered solid citizens in the small village of New Paris, south of here, both teaching Sunday School at the Union Center Church of New Brethren.

But Mrs. Rock, 24, faces first-degree murder charges stemming from the May 25 death of her 26-year-old husband in Elkhart General Hospital.

Elkhart County Prosecutor C. Whitely Slabaugh said Thursday that martial problems led to Mrs. Rock slowly poisoning her husband by spiking his scotch with liquid ant poison.

Mrs. Rock surrendered to authorities after a grand jury returned the murder indictment Wednesday.

The prosecutor said Mrs. Rock signed a confession admitting she poisoned her husband slowly over a period of several weeks by putting arsenic in scotch and water drinks and in soft drinks.

Slabaugh said she used a liquid ant poison "which you can buy at any drug store."

Rock, an Army veteran, had been ill for nearly a month and missed work frequently. He was employed in the cost office of a machinery firm at Middlebury.

He entered the Hospital May 22 for a tonsillectomy, but the attending surgeon "found him too grossly ill" for an operation, Slabaugh said.

The prosecutor said other doctors examined Rock and determined he had been poisoned. He died as doctors treated him for the arsenic, which an autopsy later confirmed was the cause of death.

ROCKING ENDURANCE RECORD SET
JACKSON, Tenn. (UPI)—The newest world record holder is a petite country girl in hot pants who rocked around the clock five times.

Susan Eliff, 18, set a new world rocking chair endurance record of 125 hours and 40 minutes Thursday afternoon, but she figures she had about reached her limit.

India's Bengal tigers have dwindled to an estimated 2,500 compared with 40,000 in 1930.

Tanks Destroyed Since Offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allied forces have reported destroying between 400 and 500 plus North Vietnamese tanks since the enemy offensive began, Pentagon sources say.

The tally coincides with a sharp dropoff in reported sightings of North Vietnamese tanks operating in the battle sectors and staging areas.

Taken together, these factors could indicate that the North Vietnamese have lost much of the armored power that helped them score important advances in the early stages of the offensive launched in late March.

U.S. analysts estimated several weeks ago that the North Vietnamese army had sent up to 600 Soviet-built tanks into the Indochina fighting.

Meanwhile, day-in, day-out U.S. bombing of North Vietnam's rail lines and U.S. minefields in the entrances of its ports are blocking replacement of armored vehicles from the Soviet Union and Communist China, officials say.

The air-interdiction campaign is destroying stockpiles of gasoline and oil needed to run the tanks, which burn about a gallon a mile. Petroleum supplies are not being replaced from outside North Vietnam, according to current assessments.

There are variations in official estimates of the tanks destroyed. Defense sources acknowledge the likelihood of some duplication in reports and of some overly bullish claims.

Nevertheless, officials say they are confident the toll of North Vietnamese armor has been very heavy.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff accept as accurate the U.S. Vietnam command's count of more than 420 North Vietnamese tanks destroyed between March 30 and June 9, the last date covered by the most recent summary.

Another compilation cited in an official military rundown lists better than 530 enemy tanks destroyed in South Vietnam, North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Of these, the South Vietnamese army and air force are credited with more than 300 tanks, the U.S. Air Force with about 130 and the remainder divided among U.S. Navy fighter

Reports from the field say that 300-pound bombs have been highly effective in knocking out tanks. Other weapons that have scored well are light antitank rockets used by South Vietnamese infantrymen, according to U.S. military officials.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH WORKERS RETURN TO JOBS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Workers have returned to their jobs under a federal court order at the world's largest brewery, Anheuser-Busch Inc.

A walkout occurred just before midnight Tuesday by members of Brewers and Malsters Local 6. Members of the Beer Bottlers Local 187 also were idled. The two-day shutdown affected 4,000 production employees.

The company said the walkout was over a jurisdictional dispute between the two unions. But union leaders said there was no jurisdictional problem, that the shutdown was actually a lockout by the company that stemmed from a disagreement over interpretation of an earlier agreement regarding layoffs.

the direction of energy

When the big wheel turns clockwise, the little wheel turns counterclockwise at a greater rate of speed. Thus man controls energy in the physical universe, determining, according to his own will, its direction and effect.

There is a spiritual universe, too. A world in which God, who gave us freedom of will, provides the guidance, help and inspiration which unite our minds with His for purposes which are GOOD.

We realize with trembling in this nuclear age that the physical and spiritual universe are not two—but ONE. We cannot live in the one and forget the other. For the world we know will perish unless man's spiritual vision governs his use of the energy he controls.

Wise and reverent minds have always known this. That is why we have CHURCHES . . . why we share their Life and Work with one another.

Over

50,000 Drivers Fail

Last year alone, over 50,000 Illinois licensed drivers failed the state written examination. This year the number of drivers that will fail could jump to a hundred thousand or more. Experts say—"One reason is, that rules and regulations change, and even some good safe drivers just don't keep up with the new laws." If your license expires this year, you may be among the hundreds of thousands that will be reexamined in 1972. So if you're nervous about taking the state written exam, here's good news. You can now purchase your own "self-scoring" test papers, complete with questions, answers and road signs you should know for that important examination day. This method has helped thousands pass the state exam. Introductory price just $6 plus 75 cents handling. (Check or money order only.) Mail to AA-AA School of Safe Driving, 6304 N. She's Short-Changed By Mutilated Envelopes

By POLLY CRAMER
DEAR POLLY—Your column is the highlight of my day. One of my Pet Peeves is to order expensive imprinted Christmas cards and find some of the envelopes sealed so tight I have to ruin them to get them open. This past Christmas I wasted 10 such envelopes from my cards as well as some with my stationery.—RUTH

DEAR POLLY—I would like to know how to make lye soap with a small amount of bacon drippings like a quart or half gallon.—DOLLY
DEAR POLLY—I am answering Miss L.W. who cannot clean the burned brown stains off of her cookie sheet. I use steel wool pads and soap by holding the pad with a piece of paper towel over the top so the steel wool does not get in my fingers and then scour with water and the soap.—FLORENCE
DEAR POLLY—To save that nasty chore of scraping paint from windows after a paint job I wet a newspaper and press it against the window so that it covers the entire glass surface. When the painting is finished I just peel off the paper and have little, if any, paint to remove from the glass. Paint that accumulates on the side of a can often becomes brittle, breaks off and falls into the paint. To be sure paint is clean and lump free before using again strain through a nylon stocking.—CHERI
DEAR POLLY—Never discard the old shower curtain when you are putting up a spanking clean new one. Put the old one underneath the new one with some rings and use it INSIDE the tub thereby keeping the new one fresh and new looking.—THELMA
DEAR POLLY—I always put the one used as a liner on the same hooks as the outer curtain.—POLLY

THE DOCTOR SAYS
Nosebleeds Are Common In Youth

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb—What can you tell me about nosebleeds? My 7-year-old has them quite often. Now I am about to climb the walls. I have had her to several specialists and they all seem to say the same thing; she will outgrow it, don't let her pick her nose and buy her a cool air humidifier because her nose is too dry.
One doctor cauterized her nose twice, but says she is too young to do this too often. They all told me that when her nose bleeds, to either pack it with cotton or apply pressure of something else, but they don't understand the way I feel seeing her nose starting to bleed and just when I really start to panic over all the blood she is losing, it will stop.
What really can be done, and what can I give her to build up her system from losing all the blood?
Dear Reader—The doctors you have seen have given you very good, sound advice, which is usually what is recommended for this problem.
Most bleeding from the nose occurs in the soft part. Either putting a pack in the nose or pressing the soft tip against the head part and pinching the nose tip often helps stop bleeding. Cold water also helps. In some cases if there is a superficial blood vessel near the end of the nose, it can be cauterized and this will control future bleeding.
It is usually true that many nosebleeds will stop on their own. If the bleeding continues, of course, the child or even an older person, may be taken to the doctor for treatment, or sometimes a more effective nose pack.
Although it always looks like a lot of blood, sometimes the amount of blood really isn't very great in terms of the number of tablespoons of blood lost. A little blood spreads out over a large area. Even so, if a person has repeated frequent nosebleeds, they may well lose too much iron, just the same as a woman in her child-bearing years may lose too much iron. This would manifest itself by an anemia and can be checked by a simple blood test.
If this should be true, the amount of iron in the diet would need to be increased and this can usually be accomplished through a good normal diet with perhaps a little more concentration on food items that contain iron. Otherwise, the body is perfectly capable of generating enough blood to take care of most ordinary nosebleeds.
Rarely, nosebleeds are associated with important medical problems, but usually the nosebleeds in children are not. They are more of a nuisance than a danger.
Of course you are upset when it occurs. Any good mother would be, but there really isn't a great deal more to be done than has already been recommended to you.

East took his ace of diamonds and returned a trump. The student lost a finesse to West's king and a trump came back.
The student won, ruffed his last diamond, played a club to his queen and a second club to North's king. East showed out and the student was faced with the problem of having to score two spade tricks to make his contract. He led the four spot from dummy. East played the eight and after considerable study the student played the deuce.
East could not afford to give a ruff and discard by a diamond play and led his three of spades.
The student thought a while and played low again. West could do no better than to play the king and the student had found a way to make his contract.
"Pretty good work, wasn't it?" he asked the professor.
"A fine recovery from bad play earlier," replied the professor. "The hand was a cinch all the time."
do you see what the professor meant? The student should have played the 10 of clubs, not the king, from dummy at trick six.
If the finesse lost, dummy's last three clubs would all be winners and the student would get to discard three spades. If the finesse won, as it would have, the student would be able to discard two spades on the ace and king of clubs.

Sato Plans To Resign Japanese Premiership

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato announced Saturday his intention to resign as head of the government and the ruling Liberal-Democratic party—LDP.

The announcement came five months before his term in office expires.

The 71-year-old Sato, speaking with a firm voice and smiling occasionally, told a gathering of about 90 LDP party members: "I am announcing my intention to retire. From now on, as a member of LDP, I will make efforts to carry out our political purposes..."

In Japanese politics the leader of a political party does not announce his resignation but rather the intention to resign. The resignation must be officially accepted by his party.

The Diet, or parliament, ended its 171-day session Friday. Sato's government had suffered a major setback when two bills it sponsored calling for hikes in national railway fares and health insurance rates were killed by the opposition of minority parties.

Sato suggested earlier that he would step down after the revision of Okinawa from U.S. to Japanese rule. That was accomplished May 15 after 26 years of U.S. administration after World War II.

Sato's prestige was badly damaged by President Nixon's surprise announcement that he would visit Peking, by the economic pressures during the world monetary crisis, and by a wide range of domestic issues.

Plan To Remove Bullet From Wallace Sunday

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — An operation to remove a bullet from the spinal canal of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is set for Sunday.

Wallace aides, announcing this Friday, said if all goes well, Wallace will be able to attend the Democratic National Convention which opens July 10.

"We fully expect that with a good recovery he will be in Miami," Billy Joe Camp, the governor's press secretary, said at a news conference.

He added that Wallace hopes to be able to return to Alabama before then.

The operation will be at Holy Cross Hospital, where Wallace has been hospitalized since May 15. He was rushed to the hospital after he was shot at Laurel, Md., where he was campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace has been paralyzed from the hips down since the shooting.

A team of surgeons removed one bullet from his body the day he was shot.

The bullet in his spinal canal was left to be removed after Wallace's physical condition was strengthened, his doctors said at the time.

This bullet is blamed for the paralysis, and doctors say they will not know if the spinal cord is cut or damaged until they operate.

Communist-Led Forces Shell U.S. Positions

SAIGON (AP) — Communist-led forces Saturday shelled two big U.S. installations in the northern part of South Vietnam from which American forces are being redeployed, wounding nine servicemen and killing four Vietnamese civilians and wounding three.

A half dozen Soviet-built 122 mm rockets hit the Da Nang area, which has been under shelling attack the week long.

The U.S. Command said one American was wounded and two buildings were damaged at the U.S. airbase which is being turned over to the Vietnamese.

Saigon headquarters reported four Vietnamese civilians were killed and three were wounded when one of the rockets landed in a populated area.

At Phu Bai, to the north of Da Nang, eight Americans were wounded in a seven round rocket barrage, the U.S. Command said.

A U.S. Army helicopter trying to locate the North Vietnamese rocket sites caught fire from a defective flare and crashed five miles southeast of Da Nang. Five Americans were injured.

SENATE EXTENDS FLAMMABLE FABRICS ACT PROTECTION

WASHINGTON (A) — The Senate voted unanimously Friday to extend the protection of the Flammable Fabrics Act to sleepwear for children up to 12 years old.

present law covers only sleepwear sizes 1 to 6.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., offered the amendment to extend it to size 14 and said this generally would cover children up to 12 years of age.

Magnuson said the problem of burns from flammable sleepwear was serious for small children but that there also were many incidents involving older ones.

His amendment would require the Commerce Department to come up with standards to make the larger sizes inflammable by July, 1973.

North Viets Say U.S. Bombing Dikes And Dams

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam declared Friday the United States is systematically bombing its flood protection system of dikes and dams, "trying to sow death and famine in North Vietnam."

A statement by North Vietnam's minister of irrigation was distributed here by the Hanoi delegation to the peace talks. The statement detailed alleged U.S. bomb attacks on important dikes and dams since heavy bombing resumed last April.

The unnamed minister said six important sections of the Red River dikes were heavily damaged, seven key sections of the Thai Binh dikes were bombed repeatedly and the Clear River dikes were broken at five points in sections up to 100 yards long.

"The lives of hundreds of thousands of persons" would be endangered if the damaged sections of the dikes broke during the forthcoming rainy season, and "hundreds of thousands of hectares of land would be submerged" in Nghe An and Ha Tinh provinces, the minister said.

He cited specific raids including an attack last Wednesday when he said antipersonnel bombs were dropped on working parties repairing a dike near Thanh Hoa, "killing or wounding dozens of persons including teachers and their pupils working as volunteers during their vacations."

er of a political party does not announce his resignation but rather the intention to resign. The resignation must be officially accepted by his party.

Communist-Led Forces Shell U.S. Positions

SAIGON (AP) — Communist-led forces Saturday shelled two big U.S. installations in the northern part of South Vietnam from which American forces are being redeployed, wounding nine servicemen and killing four Vietnamese civilians and wounding three.

A half dozen Soviet-built 122 mm rockets hit the Da Nang area, which has been under shelling attack the week long.

The U.S. Command said one American was wounded and two buildings were damaged at the U.S. airbase which is being turned over to the Vietnamese.

Saigon headquarters reported four Vietnamese civilians were killed and three were wounded when one of the rockets landed in a populated area.

At Phu Bai, to the north of Da Nang, eight Americans were wounded in a seven round rocket barrage, the U.S. Command said.

A U.S. Army helicopter trying to locate the North Vietnamese rocket sites caught fire from a defective flare and crashed five miles southeast of Da Nang. Five Americans were injured.

SENATE EXTENDS FLAMMABLE FABRICS ACT PROTECTION

WASHINGTON (A) — The Senate voted unanimously Friday to extend the protection of the Flammable Fabrics Act to sleepwear for children up to 12 years old.

present law covers only sleepwear sizes 1 to 6.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., offered the amendment to extend it to size 14 and said this generally would cover children up to 12 years of age.

Magnuson said the problem of burns from flammable sleepwear was serious for small children but that there also were many incidents involving older ones.

His amendment would require the Commerce Department to come up with standards to make the larger sizes inflammable by July, 1973.

North Viets Say U.S. Bombing Dikes And Dams

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam declared Friday the United States is systematically bombing its flood protection system of dikes and dams, "trying to sow death and famine in North Vietnam."

A statement by North Vietnam's minister of irrigation was distributed here by the Hanoi delegation to the peace talks. The statement detailed alleged U.S. bomb attacks on important dikes and dams since heavy bombing resumed last April.

The unnamed minister said six important sections of the Red River dikes were heavily damaged, seven key sections of the Thai Binh dikes were bombed repeatedly and the Clear River dikes were broken at five points in sections up to 100 yards long.

"The lives of hundreds of thousands of persons" would be endangered if the damaged sections of the dikes broke during the forthcoming rainy season, and "hundreds of thousands of hectares of land would be submerged" in Nghe An and Ha Tinh provinces, the minister said.

He cited specific raids including an attack last Wednesday when he said antipersonnel bombs were dropped on working parties repairing a dike near Thanh Hoa, "killing or wounding dozens of persons including teachers and their pupils working as volunteers during their vacations."

The Diet, or parliament, ended its 171-day session Friday. Sato's government had suffered a major setback when two bills it sponsored calling for hikes in national railway fares and health insurance rates were killed by the opposition of minority parties.

Sato suggested earlier that he would step down after the revision of Okinawa from U.S. to Japanese rule. That was accomplished May 15 after 26 years of U.S. administration after World War II.

Sato's prestige was badly damaged by President Nixon's surprise announcement that he would visit Peking, by the economic pressures during the world monetary crisis, and by a wide range of domestic issues.

Plan To Remove Bullet From Wallace Sunday

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — An operation to remove a bullet from the spinal canal of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is set for Sunday.

Wallace aides, announcing this Friday, said if all goes well, Wallace will be able to attend the Democratic National Convention which opens July 10.

"We fully expect that with a good recovery he will be in Miami," Billy Joe Camp, the governor's press secretary, said at a news conference.

He added that Wallace hopes to be able to return to Alabama before then.

The operation will be at Holy Cross Hospital, where Wallace has been hospitalized since May 15. He was rushed to the hospital after he was shot at Laurel, Md., where he was campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace has been paralyzed from the hips down since the shooting.

A team of surgeons removed one bullet from his body the day he was shot.

The bullet in his spinal canal was left to be removed after Wallace's physical condition was strengthened, his doctors said at the time.

This bullet is blamed for the paralysis, and doctors say they will not know if the spinal cord is cut or damaged until they operate.

The couple then went from Cannella's courtroom to the State Supreme Court about three blocks away, there to receive a further break. Justice Joseph Martinis could have given them eight years apiece for larceny and conspiracy, to which they also had pleaded guilty.

Instead, after lecturing them sternly, Martinis turned them loose with only the federal sentence hanging over them.

However, Martinis sentenced Irving's researcher in the Hughes autobiography, Richard Susskind to six months for larceny and conspiracy. He had not been charged in the federal case.

Thus the bizarre case came to a climax with Irving and his wife called upon to serve but a small percentage of the 13 years they could have gotten in the two courts.

McGraw-Hill won a court award from the Irvings last week for the $750,000 paid to Irving and intended for Hughes.

The publishers are still negotiating for the return of money given Irving for expenses.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert Morvillo had told Cannella in advance that the government had no wish for maximum punishment, inasmuch as the Irvings had spared the expense of a trial and cooperated in the prosecution.

Morvillo also revealed that in return for the guilty pleas the United States was prepared to negotiate with Switzerland, where Mrs. Irving deposited McGraw-Hill checks intended for Hughes and where she faces charges of forgery and embezzlement.

The greatest literary hoax of modern times unfolded last December when McGraw-Hill announced it had acquired world rights to Irving's autobiography of Hughes, the billionaire recluse. The publishing house sold magazine rights to Life.

Irving collected $650,000 intended to reimburse Hughes for the rights, plus a $100,000 advance on royalties, and $15,000 in expenses.

From a Bahamas hideout, however, Hughes denounced Irving's manuscript as a fraud. And under intense questioning, Mrs. Irving subsequently admitted that she deposited the money in Swiss banks.

Before he threw in the sponge, Irving claimed that he met Hughes and gathered information from him on one occasion in Mexico, where he was accompanied by beautiful blonde Baroness Nina van Pallandt, a Danish night club singer.

The baroness replied that Irving was never out of her sight for more than 90 minutes and that there was no trace of Hughes to interrupt her Mexican idyll with Irving.

On March 13, the Irvings pleaded guilty to federal conspiracy charges and the state larceny and conspiracy counts.

Irving, his complexion ashen, pleaded with Judge Cannella for "justice and mercy."

"As I look back, I seem to have turned my back on everything I lived for," the writer went on. "I put my wife in terrible jeopardy. I know what she did and why she did it. She trusted me and I abused that trust."

"My wife, is not a sophisticated person. That is not to say she is not intelligent, but in this affair I don't think she fully understood what was happening."

Irving's attorney, Maurice Nessen, told the court: "Everything he wanted—respect from his fellow writers—is lost. He has felt the disgrace, the daily barbs. He has been named 'Con man of the year.' He is the bigcurity Council take effective measures against air pirates.

The United States' U.N. delegation immediately called for a meeting of the council "at the earliest possible moment" to consider possible provisions against skyjacking.

The delegation was consulting with other delegations on the provisions for a resolution to be laid before the 15-member council.

John J. O'Donnell, president of the U.S. Air Line Pilots Association, said in Washington that its 31,000 members would participate in the protest.

There were reports in Japan and parts of the United States that some pilots might not take part.

But two international unions of ground airport personnel said they would support the stoppage.

"If any aircraft is not serviced on the ground, she will not fly," said Charles Blyth, general secretary of the United Transport Workers Federation. He said his union had 250,000 members in civil aviation.

The International Association of Machinists also said it would honor the stoppage.

"This drastic action is the result of the lack of effective international measures to stem the tide of unlawful interference with civil aviation and constitutes a strong expression of deep concern and solidarity on the part of the world's aviation community," Forsberg said.

"The U.N. must clearly go on record to the effect that unlawful interference with civil aviation is a threat to international peace and security and must be dealt with as such, including the application of enforcement procedures," the federation president continued.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, who met with federation officials Thursday, said he was "certainly disappointed" that the pilots were going ahead with the strike, first threatened June 9.

The 24-hour shutdown, ALPA said, would apply to all U.S. flights—domestic and international, scheduled and supplemental, and civilian charter operations. Flights in the air when the stoppage begins will be permitted to continue to the next stop.

Individual union chapters will decide on whether to fly military charters, the ALPA said.

A spokesman for Pacific Southwest Airlines, which flies exclusively in California, said its pilots would be working Monday.

In Chicago, a United Airlines spokesman said the ALPA master council there had decided not to support the world protest. But ALPA in Washington had said that only O'Donnell was an authorized spokesman for the pilots.

The Air Transport Association said 500,000 persons fly daily

Business — Market Wrapup

Of Violating Securities Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission accused International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., two of its senior officers, and two other companies Friday of violations of federal securities laws stemming from an anti-trust settlement with the Justice Department.

The SEC issued a statement saying it plans to file a complaint against ITT seeking to enjoin the company and the officers' name from further violations of securities laws.

According to the SEC, ITT is charged with having failed to disclose in a prospectus the sales of about 26,000 shares of ITT stock by a wholly-owned subsidiary of its Hartford Fire Insurance subsidiary.

The prospectus failed to disclose "the material change of the settlement posture" on negotiations between ITT and the Justice Department in connection with three antitrust suits impending against the company, the SEC said.

Also named were Howard J. Aibel and John J. Navin, two senior executives of the company, along with Mediobanca of Milan, Italy, and Lazard Freres & Co., a New York securities firm.

It was during the summer of last year that the Justice Department settled an antitrust suit against ITT in connection with Hartford Insurance.

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask a broker why the market is up or down at any specific minute and he will give you an answer. The worst crime in the business is to appear misinformed. You must always have an explanation.

These explanations are not difficult to come by. The big brokerage houses usually supply their people with a likely explanation before the start of business each day, usually tying it to news events.

Even without such a cue card, any broker can take his choice of a dozen or so explanations from the daily newspaper: war, politics, monetary policy, strikes, corporate profits, government regulation, inflation.

You don't have to prove that any of these are real factors because it isn't likely that anybody can effectively disprove them.

An examination of this process is unusually significant now because the personalities and programs of the presidential candidates have been used as grist.

The market is disappointing investors, it is said, because of the likelihood that Sen. George McGovern will be named the Democratic candidate for president.

The explanation sounds reasonable when it is accompanied by highlights of the more anti-establishment aspects of the McGovern program. The market is establishment, and it doesn't care for ideas on redistributing wealth.

But nobody in Wall Street, with all its alleged research power, seems able to offer evidence that even suggests that this "explanation" is based in fact. Though it serves the market, it may disserve the larger public.

A perceptive analysis of the market is made by John Wright, the Bridgeport, Conn., investment adviser.

Wright calls the current interpretations "excuses" for rather than "causes of" what he lists them:

—Renewed doubts about inflation being brought under control following a rise in the Wholesale Price Index.

—The McGovern candidacy.

—A growing realization that postelection tax reform will add up to higher taxes and lower deductions, "regardless of who appoints the tax collectors."

Why does he call them excuses rather than causes?

"The stock market not only always finds an excuse to do what it is going to do anyway, but also creates its own psychology in the process."

This means "the most unfavorable interpretation of the most adverse developments always seems to dominate the news during a decline—and vice versa."

In his view, no matter what excuses are offered, mere seasonal influences will take hold. The summer solstice is only a week away, he notes, and that usually coincides with the traditional summer rally. Nature, he feels, will take its course, and stocks along with it.

Economic Forces Working To Up Interest Rates

By CARLTON SMITH

If the level of interest rates is something that affects your finances, don't be lulled by the recent indications of easing. Economic forces that are plainly visible today are working to push them up, perhaps sharply, during the second half of the year.

They are plainly visible, at least, to Henry Kaufman, economist and partner in one of Wall Street's most prestigious firms, Salomon Brothers, an investment banking house that managed or co-managed the issuance of more than $7 billion in corporate securities last year, got that way by knowing what's going to happen next—and they have an impressive record over there of being right.

Kaufman didn't sound very cheerful about some of the economic and political developments he sees as possible in the months ahead when he spoke to the Financial Analysts Federation in New York recently. The expected credit squeeze and pressure on interest rates, he believes, may well result in some kind of direct government controls in the credit markets.

"I am convinced," he said, "that a sharp escalation in interest rates would not be tolerated during the next period of excessive economic demands." He predicted that "moral suasion" would first be tried—it's called "jawboning" in Washington—and that "the eventual failure of these attempts would then be followed by the introduction of formalized controls."

A principal source of inflationary pressure is swelling government expenditures. Combined federal, state and local spending last year amounted to 33 per cent of the country's gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced in the nation, down to the last toothpick and haircut. Federal spending in particular—now running $20 billion in excess of the revenue from taxes—makes heavy demands on the available supply of credit funds, as well as pumping up inflationary pressure.

Traditionally, when the economy begins to overheat, and inflation, those who operate the country's economic controls have allowed interest rates to rise—or forced them to—in order to tighten credit and cool things off. Kaufman sees the economy approaching such a condition in the next few months. "The stimulative impact of the federal budget is likely to continue throughout most of the fiscal year" beginning in July, and "the likely increase in short-term interest rates, together with expectations of rising inflation later this year and in 1973, will push long-term interest rates to higher ground."

The pressures could be eased and possibly drained off, Kaufman says, if the administration would "lower the budgetary profile" and curtail the stimulative deficit spending—but most Washington watchers would call that a dim hope.

What seems more likely is another set of government controls—with the authorities perhaps even directing the flow of money, deciding who needs it and who gets it. "Private decision making of all sorts may be increasingly questioned and restricted, and direct controls over both the economic and financial process might become a dominant and perhaps long-lasting feature of governmental policies," says Kaufman.

For, as he observes, there have been drastic changes in political philosophy. "Actions that in the past may have been considered unwarranted limitations of economic and financial freedom are now frequently accepted as a political fact of life."

Which may in part account for the new grass-roots populism that seems to puzzle many of the politicians.

ment controls in the credit markets.

"I am convinced," he said, "that a sharp escalation in interest rates would not be tolerated during the next period of excessive economic demands." He predicted that "moral suasion" would first be tried—it's called "jawboning" in Washington—and that "the eventual failure of these attempts would then be followed by the introduction of formalized controls."

A principal source of inflationary pressure is swelling government expenditures. Combined federal, state and local spending last year amounted to 33 per cent of the country's gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced in the nation, down to the last toothpick and haircut. Federal spending in particular—now running $20 billion in excess of the revenue from taxes—makes heavy demands on the available supply of credit funds, as well as pumping up inflationary pressure.

Traditionally, when the economy begins to overheat, and inflation, those who operate the country's economic controls have allowed interest rates to rise—or forced them to—in order to tighten credit and cool things off. Kaufman sees the economy approaching such a condition in the next few months. "The stimulative impact of the federal budget is likely to continue throughout most of the fiscal year" beginning in July, and "the likely increase in short-term interest rates, together with expectations of rising inflation later this year and in 1973, will push long-term interest rates to higher ground."

The pressures could be eased and possibly drained off, Kaufman says, if the administration would "lower the budgetary profile" and curtail the stimulative deficit spending—but most Washington watchers would call that a dim hope.

What seems more likely is another set of government controls—with the authorities perhaps even directing the flow of money, deciding who needs it and who gets it. "Private decision making of all sorts may be increasingly questioned and restricted, and direct controls over both the economic and financial process might become a dominant and perhaps long-lasting feature of governmental policies," says Kaufman.

For, as he observes, there have been drastic changes in political philosophy. "Actions that in the past may have been considered unwarranted limitations of economic and financial freedom are now frequently accepted as a political fact of life."

Which may in part account for the new grass-roots populism that seems to puzzle many of the politicians.

Finley Signs Pact, Pros Will Remain

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley now owns the Oakland A's, the California Seals and the Memphis Pros and says they're all going to stay put.

Chicago insurance magnate Finley, signed an agreement Friday to acquire the shaky Memphis franchise in the American Basketball Association with the purchase price guessed at about $250,000.

That mainly involves, it was reported, picking up the tab for debts owed by the Memphis club which had some 4,600 stockholders holding some 121,000 shares originally priced at $5.00 per share.

"I definitely will keep the team in Memphis, although I am not committed at all," said Finley. "It is fully my intention right now to keep the club in Memphis indefinitely because it should be a success in an area with only one pro sports team."

The signing came on the third day of talks with Memphis officials, including John (Buddy) Leak, Pros board chairman.

As an unprecedented owner of three major pro franchises, Finley said his baseball A's of the American League will remain in Oakland, as will his California Seals of the National Hockey League.

"The A's and the Seals are very happy in the Bay area, and I have been happy since I went there," said Finley. "And those teams will remain there regardless of the nonsense you read about any change."

Finley said there was nothing premeditated about his buying a pro basketball team, although he conceded, "I think a merger of the National Basketball Association and ABA is the answer to pro basketball's problems and I'm most hopeful that a merger will come about."

He said he was not aware that any merger was imminent. Actually, it was the salesmanship of Coach Bob Bass of the ABA's Floridians which lured him into purchase of the Memphis franchise.

"He called me up trying to interest me in buying the Floridians less than a month ago," said Finley. "I nearly hung up on him, but he kept talking. He didn't sell me on the Floridians, but he got me interested in pro basketball."

"Then, this week, after a deal to sell Memphis to a Texas group fell through, the ABA called me up from its meeting in New York and I agreed to buy that club."

Finley said he was not interested in an offer to buy either the ABA's Florida or Pittsburgh franchises which were cancelled Tuesday, leaving the ABA a nine-member league.

Finley said he will revamp the Memphis club completely, naming by next week a successor to former Pros' coach Babe McCarthy. "Within two days, I have had seven individuals call about the coaching job and two of them are nationally known," said Finley.

"Due to the fact we will be starting close financially, the coach also may be my general manager," Finley declined to say whether Bass, who whetted his appetite for a pro cage franchise, might be the man.

"We'll change the Memphis colors to the Kelly Green and California Gold my other teams wear and we'll have a contest to select a new name. I don't like the word 'Pros.' It will be 'Memphis Something.'"

Finley said that while club attendance has averaged 4,600 at the new Memphis MidSouth Coliseum, "with proper promotion and talent development we can develop sellout crowds of 12,000 within two years."

"It's the only major league pro sports in the area, so it should go big."

NBA Sets Player Fine For Contest

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. VA. (AP) — The National Basketball Association's board of Governors unanimously passed a resolution Friday directing Commissioner Walter Kennedy to fine each player who participated without permission of his club in an all-star game against the American Basketball Association May 25.

In New York, Larry Fleisher, counsel for the NBA Players Association, said the governors' action was "outrageous and will not be tolerated." He said that, if the fines are levied, the players would go to court to overturn the fines or might call a general strike next September.

The game at Uniondale, N.Y., was sponsored by each league's players association.

The group included Bob Lanier of Detroit, Wilt Chamberlain and Gail Goodrich of Los Angeles, Archie Clark of Baltimore, Oscar Robertson of Milwaukee, Bob Love of Chicago, John Havlicek of Boston, Nate Archibald of Cincinnati and Dave DeBusschere of New York.

Paul Silas and Connie Hawkins of Phoenix also played for the NBA but Kennedy said both had permission from their clubs.

The governors ordered the fines to be equal to the amount earned by each participant. They also directed that the fines collected would be donated to appropriate charities for research foundations at the commissioner's discretion.

It has been reported that the winning NBA team received a total of $33,000 and divided it equally, giving each player $3,000.

Section 17 of the NBA standard player contract forbids players from participating in exhibition games without the approval of their owners. The ABA gave its approval to the game.

Meanwhile, the Board of governors chose Abe Pollin of the Baltimore Bullets as the NBA's first chairman of the board and adopted several rule changes.

He will serve a one-year tenure as board chairman. The rules committee unanimously recommended to the board the approval of a rule change similar to one adopted by colleges this year.

It says the first four one-shot fouls committed by a team in each quarter will not be shot by the opposing team. Instead, the opposing team will put the ball in play from the sideline at a spot nearest where the foul occurred.

If a two-shot foul is among the first four committed, the two shots will be taken. This rule, however, will be adopted on an experimental basis during the 1972 pre-season games.

LONG LOOK: Jack Nicklaus takes a long look as he lines up a chip shot from the rough off the first green during second round action in the 72nd U.S. Open Golf Tournament at Pebble Beach, California, Friday afternoon. Nicklaus, who entered the round in a tie with several others with 71, bogeyed the par-four hole.

U.S. Open

Nicklaus Shares 2nd Round Lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus headed a group of six players tied for the lead but still seeking position on the craggy cliffs of Pebble Beach while Arnold Palmer moved up with a charging, birdie-birdie finish Friday in the second round of the U.S. Open Golf Championship.

The heavily-favored Nicklaus, already the Masters champion and winner of more than $156,000 this season, shrugged off the effects of three consecutive bogeys in the home stretch and finished with a 73 for 144.

That put him even with par for two trips over the cool and breezy Pebble Beach Golf Links, stretching for 6,812 yards through stands of gnarled Monterey pines.

"Well, I'm still even par and that's as good as anybody and better than most," said Nicklaus who seeks this prestigious title as the second s.e.p in his quest for an unprecedented one-year sweep of all the world's major titles.

"I just hope I got my bad round out of my system," he said after making bogeys on the 14th through 16th holes in the cool, breezy weather.

Nicklaus, who shared the first round lead with five others, was tied at 144 after 35 holes with Australian veteran Bruce Crampton, 22-year-old rookie Lanny Wadkins, longshot Cesar Sanudo and a pair of former University of Houston players, Kermit Zarley and Homero Blancas.

Wadkins, a former national amateur champion and the leading rookie on the pro tour this season with more than $50,000 in winnings, had a brilliant 68.

Blancas, who won the Phoenix Open earlier this year, had 11 one-putts on the tiny greens as he and Crampton matched 70s. Sanudo, a Mexican-born American citizen who has yet to win in four years on the tour, used an old Lee Trevino putter to record his 72. Zarley had a 73.

"It's something of a relief," Palmer smiled after crisp iron shots left him birdie putts of four and six feet on the final two holes as he delighted his vast and faithful gallery with a charge reminiscent of his domination of the game in the 1960s. "It's probably the best round I've played all year. Not the best scoring round, but maybe the best playing," said the 42-year-old who hasn't won a major title since the 1964 Masters and has been shut out of victories this season.

His blazing 68, matching Wadkins' effort as the best in this tournament, left him alone at 145. He stormed past 49 players with his four-under-par round that put him in position to fulfill one of his most cherished ambitions—another major title.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, just three days out of a hospital and still fighting the lingering effects of a bout with pneumonia and bronchitis, birdied the final hole in the evening chill for a 72 and 146—just two strokes off the pace midway through the chase for the first of three National Open crowns he swept a year ago.

He was tied with South African Gary Player, who had a 74, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Ralph Johnson, Lee Elder and Rod Funseth.

Rodriguez and Zarley shared the first round lead with Nicklaus and three others. Orville Moody, Tom Shaw and veteran Mason Rudolph couldn't keep pace in the grinding pressure and subtle demands of the tough old course that refused to yield to par after 36 holes.

Moody slipped from a 71 to 77 for 148. Shaw went to 79-150 and Rudolph blew to an 80—one of more than two dozen scores of 80 or higher.

Billy Casper, a two-time champion, had a 73 and was one of a large group at 147 as a massive jam of some 20 players were locked within three strokes of each other.

Nicklaus had it three under par at one stage and appeared ready to make a rout of it until Pebble struck back. "I felt I was playing better as I went along and thought I may be able to get it a couple of more strokes under par, and then I got to No. 14," Nicklaus said.

The hard-hitting blond with the massive, powerful legs drove it through the fairway on the par five 14th and found himself in the rough. He hit an iron out, but got a severe slice.

"The ball just went dead right," he said, and wound up about a foot out of bounds. He had to take his penalty drop, reached the green in five and holed a 20-foot putt for the bogey six.

He bogeyed the next hole with three putts. And he drifted back to even par and a tie for the lead when he took a third consecutive bogey on the next hole, coming up short of the green.

Palmer, still accompanied by a huge, fiercely loyal crowd, coaxed six birdies out of the picturesque layout, but took a three-putt bogey on the eighth and bogeyed the 15th when he put his drive in the rough and came up short of the green.

"I hit my irons reasonably well," the intensely competitive Palmer said but my putting wasn't all that good. I did make a couple, however, and that's a relief."

His only birdie putts of any length were from 12 feet on the second and 30 on the 11th. The other four were from six feet or less as his crisp iron play left him opportunity after opportunity.

Trevino, speaking in a hoarse whisper, said he was still very ill.

"I'm just trying to get through without dying," he said.

"I'm not playing all that well. The putter is doing it all." He had birdie putts of 15 and 20 feet, then holed another from 12 to move up on the last hole.

Hickman, Williams Power Chicago 4-0

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Hickman and Billy Williams cracked home runs in support of the six-hit pitching of rookie Burt Hooton, powering the Chicago Cubs to a 4-0 victory Friday over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Hickman hit his sixth homer into a 20-mile-an-hour wind leading off the second inning and Williams, slamming his fifth homer in the last four games and his 12th of the season, hit a two-run shot in the third inning after G'enn Beckert had doubled.

Hooton, 6-4, was in command after working his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning by striking out Willie Crawford.

Chicago scored its final run in the ninth when third baseman Steve Garvey fumbled Randy Hundley's bases-loaded, two-out grounder. Claude Osteen, 7-4, was the loser. Los Angeles 000 000-0 6 2 Williams (12).

Harrelson, Nolan Guide Mets, 2-1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bud Harrelson tripled and then lead into the seventh when Duff Dyer singled with one out, moved up on Perez' error and a fly ball and then scored on Willie Mays' single.

In the ninth, Harrelson tripled to left center with one out. Pinch hitter Tommie Agee was walked intentionally and then, while pitching to Mays, Nolan uncorked his wild pitch, allowing Harrelson to score the deciding run.

Cincinnati took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Tony Perez doubled and then came home on George Foster's single against New York starter Jerry Koosman.

Giants Crush Cardinals 6-1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bobby Bonds' 10th home run highlighted an 11-hit attack propelling the San Francisco Giants to a 6-1 National League baseball victory Friday night over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bonds' homer came with teammate Tito Fuentes aboard in the sixth inning.

Ahead of the blast, the Giants had hopped on Cards' starter Rick Wise, 5-7, for eight of their hits and a 4-1 lead in the first three innings.

Right-hander Don Carrithers, 2-3, was the Giants' winner, allowing seven hits.

Carrithers drove in a run with a two-out single in the second and the Giants scored two more in the third when Chris Speier opened with a single, Dave Kingman doubled and Dave Rader singled.

Rader's second inning single had started the two-run rally in that inning with the first run scoring on Eliot Maddox' double and a force-out and Carrithers delivering the second.

Two Grid Stars Sign Tenders To Join Illini

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Two more all-state football players — center Darrell Rodenhauer of Addison Trail and halfback Art Monaco of Norridge (Ridge-wood) — have signed tenders and will become members of Coach Bob Blackman's Fighting Illini football team next fall.

Rodenhauser, a 6-3, 240-pounder who was named an all-star by both the Chicago Daily News and the Rockford newspapers, earned All-Des Plaines Valley League honors both his junior and senior years.

"Darrell is the finest center I've ever seen in our league," said Blazer's Coach Don Layne. "He is the most outstanding blocker I've ever coached."

Rodenhauser ranks in the upper 40 per cent of his graduating class and as a junior advanced to the State Track Meet as a discus thrower. He also wrestled on the Addison Trail varsity at heavyweight.

"Darrell's twin brother, Gary, also will be on our freshman team next fall as a walk-on candidate," Blackman said of the 6-3, 210-pounder who played defensive end. "Gary missed many of Addison Trail's games his senior year."

Monaco, a 5-10, 180-pound unanimous all-Tri-County Conference selection, was named an all-star by the Rockford newspapers after helping the Rebels compile a 17-1 record his final two seasons. Monaco gained 1,111 yards in 135 carries with an 8.2 average his senior campaign and totaled 30 touchdowns his two years on the varsity.

"Art is one of the finest running backs I have ever coached," said Rebel Coach Mike Mariani. "He has all of the natural ability to become a top-notch college runner and he also was very outstanding for us as a defensive back."

To date, the Fighting Illini have announced the signing to tenders of 27 high school seniors — 18 of them from the State of Illinois.

JETS BACK AT HOFSTRA HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Jets will hold their summer training camp at Hofstra University for the fifth straight year.

The camp will open in mid-July and run through the first week of September. Meeting rooms will be available in the new physical education center. The team will make quarters in Tower D.

Y Announces Plans To Include Tennis Lessons

The Jacksonville YMCA announced Friday that it is expanding its program involvement to include the area of tennis leagues. The program will be open to any interested player, experienced and inexperienced, from Jacksonville and the surrounding areas.

Divisions will be developed for Grade School Girls, Grade School Boys, Jr. Hi. Girls (7th, 8th, and 9th), Jr. Hi. Boys (7th, 8th & 9th), High School Girls, High School Boys, Women, and Men.

Players in each division will be scheduled to play at least once a week, but not more than twice a week. Play will be Round Robin with every player playing each of the other players in his or her division. Divisional champions will be determined by the best worst record.

Players will be responsible for arranging their own playing times with their opponents. Each match will consist of three sets. BRIGHAM NEW SALUKI COACH

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Southern Illinois University trustees approved Friday the hiring of former SIU football player Isaac Brigham, 29, as an assistant football coach.

Brigham, who has been the school's ombudsman since last September, will coach the Salukis' offensive line. A former SIU guard, he played briefly for the Dallas Cowboys and Atlanta Falcons in the National Football League.

The Pop Warner Junior League has registered football teams in Canada and Mexico.

Ira Berkow

NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — I will never again enter a baseball press box and happily expect to hear tales of Einstein and Moe Berg, Ethel Barrymore and Moe Berg, Walter Johnson and Moe Berg, Bernard Berg and Moe.

I will never again expect to be quizzed on the Greek name of Mercury for the Times of London Literary Supplement crossword puzzle that Moe had with him.

And I will never again have all this suddenly interrupted by Moe for a delightedly expect explanation of such esoterica as why the second baseman has just moved one step to his right for the next batter.

Moe gave his opinions, sought your thoughts and asked his far-fung questions in a soft, agreeable, distinguished yet boyish manner.

No more. Berg died recently, unexpectedly, at age 70.

And now some of the questions that people had for him — those who considered him "a mystery man" — may be answered, somewhat: How did he earn a living when he was so often in the press box? If he had money, why did he always wear a familiar dark suit?

Was he really a secret agent during World War II? Did he know eight, 10, 12 languages?

And most mysterious, how did a guy who couldn't hit stick 15 years in the big leagues? (His lifetime average was .243, with a total of six homers.)

Being a Princeton man did not hurt his playing career, which ended in 1939, after seasons with the White Sox, Red Sox, Indians, Senators and Dodgers. While many catchers of his time had trouble remembering yesterday, Berg could catalogue in his mind the various strengths and weaknesses of opponents and help the pitchers.

But other mysteries enshrouded Moe. Friends say that they would make arrangements to meet him on a corner at a certain time, and as they pulled up at an empty corner, Moe would emerge from behind a post.

Much of his penchant for intrigue evolved from his work as an OSS agent during the Second World War. He was sworn to secrecy and rarely discussed his work behind enemy lines in pursuit of secrets. But some of his amazing adventures are documented in the book, "The Hunt for German Scientists," by Michael Bar-Zohar.

Moe was an intellectual of the highest order, apparently, and had a genius for languages. His brother, Sam Berg, a 75-year-old Newark physician, said it is apocryphal that Moe knew 12 languages.

"He knew English, Spanish,

French, Italian, German and Japanese fluently. That's all," said Dr. Berg. "Unless you count Greek and Latin. But they aren't useful for conversation. And he had a working knowledge of Russian and...."

Moe was a guest on the popular radio show "Information Please," answering questions on everything from astronomy to the Latin derivation of obscure French words. He received some 1,500 letters and was back twice.

Once I asked him if he had ever written anything. He said no. A year later I ran across an Atlantic Monthly anthology. And there was a piece entitled "Pitchers and Catchers" by Moe Berg, written in 1946.

"You saw it!" he said, when confronted, as if a cheerful riddle had been punctured. "Funny story about that," he said. And told me about Einstein and him. Both, it happened, had articles in that same Atlantic issue. A mutual Princeton friend took Berg that month to see "The Professor," who was then at Princeton.

"The Professor made me a glass of tea and played the violin," said Moe. "And he told me, 'Mister Berg,' — he said it in his German accent — you teach me baseball and I will teach you the laws of relativity. No, we must not. You will learn relativity faster than I would learn baseball!"

Moe would talk about how he left baseball tickets for Ethel Barrymore to be picked up under an assumed name. And how she left theater tickets for him for an assumed name.

And when he caught for the White Sox, he sued a false name at the Chicago public library. He didn't want any fuss made about a baseball player requesting that they save him the New York Times for him.

In 1929, Moe was going to the library each day to see if the Times had yet published the list of those who passed the law bar. Moe had been studying at Columbia Law School during the off season. One day after catching a doubleheader against the Yankees, Berg found the list at the library. And he passed. One of very few to do so.

He called his father, Bernard, in Newark. "He was a stern disciplinarian," said Moe, smiling. "I got him on the phone. 'Pa,' I said. 'I passed the bar.' And he said, 'You didn't have to call long-distance. I read the papers.'"

There was more to this than just saving on phone bills. "Pa and I detested the baseball part of his life," said Dr. Sam Berg, shortly after his brother's death.

"Moe was a barrister, a brilliant lawyer who had been with a prestigious Wall Street firm, who was capable of arguing before the Supreme Court. But he gave it all up because he loved baseball."

"He said law was too mundane for him. He had three clients when he died. He consulted with them once a week or so. And that provided him with enough money to live on. But he really didn't give a god-damn for money. He could have been a multi-millionaire. He was in with the Rockefellers and Mellons, and all that crowd."

"He wasn't practical. He was like the younger generation they've got today. He loved to gain knowledge, but didn't want to do anything with it. We lived together in four rooms for 25 years. Then three years ago I asked him to leave. All his books and magazines and newspapers had forced me into a corner."

"Baseball killed a great law career for Moe. And all baseball gave him in return was his happiness."

STEERING COLUMN

By Bill Brodrick

CAMBRIDGE, Mich. — Everything was going along just great. I sat in the co-pilot's seat staring out at the nothingness. We were at 5,000 feet right smack-dab over the middle of Lake Michigan.

Joe Frasson sat in the pilot's seat devouring cigars like they were pre-zeal sticks. The thirty-seven year old NASCAR (National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing) Grand National Stock car driver was as busy as a bear in a beehive. His hamlike hands flipped switches and turned dials. Every so often he glanced at some sort of map. I tried not to let it disturb me that most of the time it appeared to be upside down.

Frasson had picked me up earlier in the morning at a small landing strip some 50 miles northwest of Chicago. Joe was on his way from home in Golden Valley, Minnesota, a suburb of Minneapolis, to the Michigan International Speedway where he was scheduled to drive his '72 Dodge in the Motor State 400-mile race.

After driving non-stop from New York to Los Angeles with Frasson in the Union 76-Travco Motorhome during the Cannonball Baker Sea-To-Shining-Sea Race, I should have known better than to accept his free lift to Michigan.

Joe was just beginning to devour another big black cigar when he turned towards me and in his casual Italian manner uttered an obscenity, and nonchalantly stated that the radio just went out.

Oh, really?

"Don't worry though," said Joe. "This thing's got another one. Besides, you can swim, can't ya?" Typical Frasson.

It's difficult to describe a guy like Frasson. You experience him. Joe started with less than nothing and built a successful cement business in Minneapolis. But he also likes to drive race cars. In this business too, he started with zero minus one and is trying to build it into a success.

In 1969 Joe drove in one NASCAR stock car race. He won $825 for a 41st place finish. In 1970 the trek from Golden Valley found him in 22 events with two finishes in the top ten and a top contender for the Rookie of the Year award. Last year it was 17 races with a fifth place finish in the same race at Michigan that he hoped to win this year. His winnings so far were close to $21,000.

Frasson has the driving talent to win. This year he has the mechanical ability to win in the knowledge of young 19-year-old John Green of Spartanburg, South Carolina who maintains Joe's racer for him. What's lacking for Frasson, like so many other good independent drivers, is sponsorship money and the equipment it buys.

"It's really frustrating," said Joe. "To know you can go out and win races if only you had the equipment. John (Green) has done a tremendous job of making our car perform with what he has to work with. At Darlington this spring we finished third and at Talladega we finished sixth. We're qualifying among the top five in a forty car field. But we haven't the parts that are needed to take us for 500-mile flat out. It takes a sponsor to pay for those parts."

Frasson put his Dodge in the number five starting spot for the 400-mile Michigan race. Joe felt good. The crew felt good. If everything would just hold together they knew they could get their first big win. It didn't.

While running in a five car pack with Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, David Pearson and Bobby Isaac, all top drivers in the best machines that money can buy, the engine let go in Joe's car and he was through. Official results listed him as 35th.

"That blown engine may have finished us for awhile," said Frasson. "That was the last one we had. The well is just about dry. I was running right with the big boys when she let go. It makes ya sick. To be right up front and then.... We're busy talking to people. I hope we can find somebody willing to get behind us. We've got to keep trying. When you're this close to winning you can't quit."

In AAU Hurdles

SEATTLE (AP) — Rod Milburn lost his first race in more than two years Friday when U.S. Army Private Tom Hill won the first heat of the 110-meter high hurdles at the National AAU track championships.

Hill was the last man to beat Milburn, when the former Arkansas State flash captured the 1970 AAU championships in the event. Since then, Milburn had won 67 straight races including last year's AAU title.

Milburn did not get his usual fast start in the semi, and led by only a yard after two hurdles. Hill then put on a burst of speed and won the semifinal in 13.5 seconds. Milburn clocked 13.8. He had run 13.5 in Thursday's qualifying heat.

Tommie Lee White of the Southern California Striders captured the second heat in 13.9.

Arnie Robinson, the defending AAU champ, won the long jump again with his final leap in the competition. Robinson, representing the Army, trailed France's Jacques Pani by a half inch after the foreign star had gone 26 feet 3 3/4 inches on his last effort.

Robinson then went 26-3/4 for the title.
The first champion of the 84th championships was NCAA hammer throw titlist Al Schoterman. The Kent State senior from Tucson, Ariz., hit 228-1 to beat veteran Hal Connolly by more than 10 feet. Two weeks ago, Schoterman set an NCAA meet record of 231-3.

Hovley's Single Boosts Royals By Brewers, 3-2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pinch hitter Steve Hovley ripped a two-out single in the ninth inning, chasing home the winning run Friday night as the Kansas City Royals nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 3-2.

The Royals, held to one hit by Brewer starter Jim Lonborg through six innings, tied the score on pinch-hitter Joe Keough's two-run single in the seventh. The hit came after Scheinblum singled and went to third on Cookie Rojas' two-out double.

Scott gave Milwaukee a 1-0 lead with a homer in the first inning. The Brewers' second run came in the second when Dave May singled, stole second and came home on a single by Ellie Rodriguez.

The Brewers lost a chance to tie it in the ninth when Tom Reynolds was cut down rounding third.

Spin Casters Can Adapt Streamer Flies For Bass

Some Frog Facts

By VIC WATIA
United Press International
Many Illinois bass fishermen pass up the fly fishing counter in their local sporting goods shop simply because they haven't the time, inclination or money to invest in fly fishing equipment and become proficient at the art of presenting a fly.

However, at the same time they are neglecting some of the hottest bass lures on the market—streamer flies.

Not the small, No. 10s and 12s tied with the trout fishermen in mind, but the sleek, long streamers on hooks in the No. 2 class.

These hefty streamers can easily be adapted for use by the spincaster, provided he is willing to work with a lighter line. Combined with a spinner, the flies are killers on hungry bucketmouths.

A streamer fly-spinner combination cast into a likely hiding spot and retrieved in slow jerks can spur the laziest bass into action.

Streamer flies—tied with hair or feathers—are great bass producers because they often imitate quite effectively a natural bait, such as a caterpillar, minnow or leech.

Black is a great color to use in waters where leeches are present. Streamers in combination colors of red and white, blue and white, red and yellow or solid colors of yellow, brown or white usually are best for largemouth.

If the streamers purchased appear to be dressed too bulky with bucktail or feathers, the action could be hindered and it is a good idea to thin out the fly. Bucktails should have the tail tapered to a point to give it a minnow look.

Fishermen also should know their casting capabilities with streamers before taking to the lake. Practice casting in a back yard can give the fisherman an idea of how close he must work his boat to prospective bass spots to work the streamers effectively.

One method of adding casting weight to a streamer is to add a slip sinker to the leader before tying on the streamer, but then slide the slip sinker up the leader at least seven inches and put a small split shot on the leader to prevent the sinker from sliding back to the fly. The slip sinker will add needed weight, but not greatly hinder the action of the fly. Of course, it is better if the streamer or the streamer-spinner combination is worked without additional weight.

Some streamers are available especially for spincasting, weighted with lead. Often, scouting sporting goods stores will turn up a variety of bass-busting streamer flies tied by local experts who have developed and tested their own patterns.

But many successful bass streamers also are popular trout patterns. Popular bass streamers include Brown and Gray Hackles, the Yellow Sally, Professor, Royal Coachman, Coachman and the Muddler Minnow.

If the slow-jerk retrieve isn't successful, the fisherman shouldn't hesitate in using his imagination in working the streamer in potential bass water, just as with other bass lures.

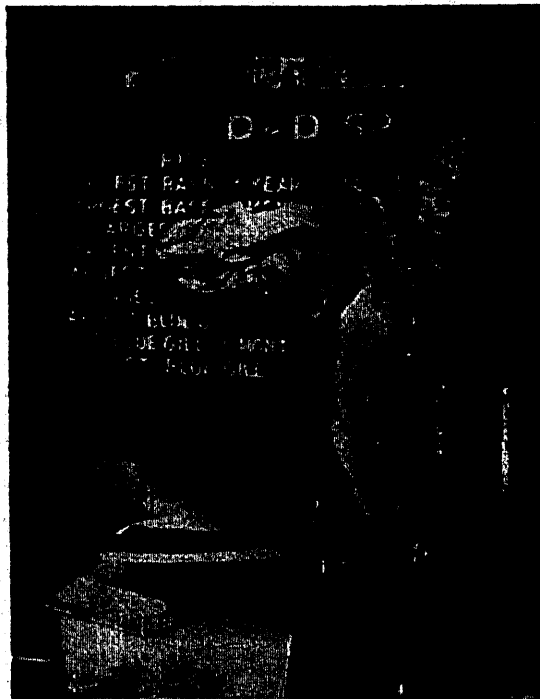

Public drawings for duck blind sites on state property at Mermet Lake and the Sanganois conservation area will be held June 24. Hunters must be at least 16 years old, have a 1971 or 1972 hunting license and duck stamp in their possession to register for blinds. Registration will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and hunters must be present at the drawings at 2 p.m. Registration for other state areas is planned for July and August.

By JIM HALL
The main sources of income from frogs are hunting and selling wild frogs for food. The species include the Bullfrog, green frog, and leopard frog. Another source of income is derived from selling breeding frogs and instructions for frog propagation to potential frog farmers.

A few pond owners here in Illinois have been interested in propagating frogs commercially, but it has not been successful. The growing season in Illinois is too short. It takes three to four years to raise them maturity. Food is a big factor in rearing adult frogs and tadpoles in great numbers. More often than not, food is scarce, plus there is often a high death rate among immature frogs. Once crowded in a commercial operation, the adult frogs are highly subject to disease. Other problems include fencing ponds to keep predators out and the frogs in.

The life cycle of the bullfrog is representative of that for most pond frogs. From late April to August while the female lays eggs in the shallows, the male fertilize's them. Thousands of eggs are laid in a jelly like mass. They always adhere to vegetation or debris.

It takes less than a week for the eggs to hatch. The tadpole emerges, and grows through different stages of development. Finally, the cycle is complete, with legs and lungs developing. This cycle may take one to two summers. The frog will become sexually mature about (Turn To Page Two)

Boat Registration Deadline June 30

SPRINGFIELD — The 1972 boating season is about to open for mariners whose boat registration is up-to-date, Kenneth E. Gruenewald, chief of the Illinois Department of Conservation boating section, has announced.

He reminded those who would use a boat having an expired registration certificate that they face the prospect of arrest and fine under the Illinois Boat Registration and Safety Act. Deadline for certificate renewal is June 30.

Gruenewald explained that if a boater fails to renew his certificate prior to the June 30 expiration date, the number is cancelled. The owner must remove it from his craft and re-register. This often means scraping and repainting the boat, as well as additional time loss on processing the application.

Unless a craft is removed permanently from the state or its registration is not renewed every two years, it retains for its lifetime the watercraft number initially assigned,

Gruenewald pointed out.

Expiration notices and renewal applications are mailed months in advance to all boaters whose certificates are due to expire, he said.

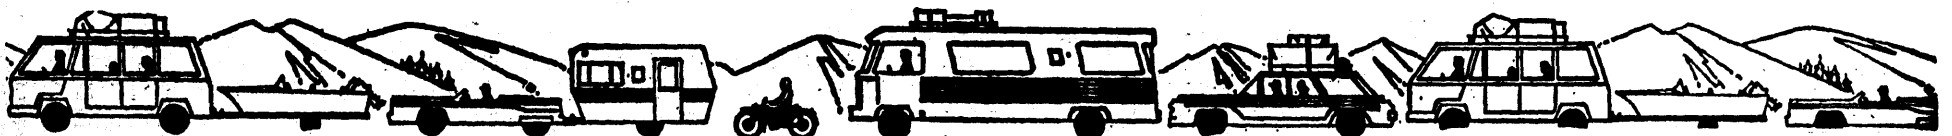

Gruenewald also said the biennial certificate expires for half of the state's 180,343 mechanically-powered boats each year. As of April 21, the state has received only 28,000 of 86,000 potential 1972 renewals, he reported.

"This means more than a quarter of the boats in the state are not yet re-registered and may have to remain beached or tied to their docks when the season opens," Gruenewald said. He noted, however, that the renewal pace is about even with last year's.

"Canoes, rowboats and sailboats less than 12 feet in length are exempted from registration," he said.

Gruenewald urged owners to submit their application as early as possible to avoid the annual eleventh-hour flood of registrations and its resulting delays in processing.

Fishing News Notes

By DICK SELLARS

Bass fishing can be one of the biggest and best sports ever to come along in many a year. It started with willow sticks, line and a hook. Worms, minnows, grasshoppers being the chief ways of catching them. Then one day a man named Heddon threw a stick in the water and a bass came up and struck it, which gave him the idea to put hooks on one. Bass fishing. Ever since then men have made all sorts of artificial lures to act like worms, minnows, grasshoppers and other live baits to catch fish. The true bass fisherman gets a thrill out of taking an artificial lure and making it somehow, looking and acting like live bait to catch a fish. A bass tournament fisherman gets up early, makes long trips, fishes long hours—10-15 hours a day, weathers all kinds of weather—hot or cold—rainy or sunny. Gets home late—gets some sleep—wakes up the next morning ready to go again. Wondering if that might be the day, that he can entice a big one to take his lure and he can come in with the biggest bass or the largest stringer ever brought in. Knowing that most everywhere he goes this could be possible. There is very few people who can have the chance to hit 40 home runs in a year, bowl 300, make 200 yards rushing in a football game, but anyone young or old can catch a bass, bigger than she or he has ever caught or anyone else has. I have fished in and helped with fishing tournaments when you had up to 300 bass fishermen in one tournament. They now have prize money up to $50,000 in one contest. I would honestly have to say that 99 per cent of these fishermen are very true sportsmen. They will show you places to fish that has taken them years to find. Give you lures so you can catch fish. Show you the hidden road beds, fence rows, under water brush piles and sunken islands that hide fish. They will exchange ideas and ways of catching fish that has taken them years to find out. They won't complain when someone else is catching fish and they are sitting beside them in the same boat. I've seen days when I could seem to be in the right place with the right lure, all the time catching fish and maybe the guy with me couldn't catch anything and then the next day I couldn't do anything right and the other guy caught all the fish. I feel that I am going to keep throwing lures till I find a better way to catch fish.

I get just as much thrill netting for and helping the other person catch a fish and being a sport of catching fish as catching them myself. I think 99 per cent of true bass fishermen think the same way as I do. I think the Taylorville Club we fished a week ago were excellent sportsmen (Turn To Page Four)

Frog Season To Begin

SPRINGFIELD — The season for taking frogs in Illinois will begin on June 15, according to William Harth, superintendent of the Division of Fisheries for the Illinois Department of Conservation.

The 77-day season will conclude on August 31. The daily limit and possession limit for frogs is eight.

Harth warned prospective frog hunters that it is unlawful to take frogs by using firearms, gas guns or air guns.

Beat The High Cost Of Camping

By JIM HALL

Many of the camping spots around the country are very popular and overcrowded. As a result owners of these campgrounds tend to up their prices. Some keep their prices as high as possible. Some people pay, however, if you take the trouble you can find camping parks that are equally nice.

One way to beat the high cost of camping is to stop at free overnight spots that are located in cities and towns throughout the U.S.A. More than 1000 such locations are listed in the 1972 Good Sam Club Recreational Vehicle Owners Directory. You can obtain a copy by sending your check for $4 and 50 cents to cover postage and handling. Send it to "Good Sam Club" P.O. Box 500, Calabasas, Calif. 9102.

the third or fourth year. The methods of capture are relatively simple. A hook and line attached to a long pole and baited with worms, insects or red cloth will work. Many people use gigs, and spear them. Still others catch them by hand at night, after blinding them with a bright light. Frog gigging is enjoyed by a vast number of people, and frog legs are sure good eating.

and were very fine fishermen. As president of the Jacksonville Club, I hope we can have a rematch soon. I learned more about fishing Sanceris Lake than any other lake I have ever fished in one trip. I thought all of their fishermen were good sportsmen and very good fishermen.

When you go fishing next time take someone with you, help them to catch fish, try taking a boy or girl, its a great sport.

Bob Hunt and Jim Stahlman caught 6 nice bass on bombers weighing up to 5 lb.-3 oz. at Lake Jacksonville. Chuck Stratman caught a 1 lb.-10 oz. blue gill on a black knot this was the largest blue gill of the year so far. Little Ronald Capps caught nice crappie at Nichols Park on worms by himself weighing up to 14 oz. Wm. F. Pruitt caught a 23 lb.-14 oz. carp at the Sportsman Club in White Hall.

Jacksonville Bass Club is leaving for Stockton, Mo. this Friday night at 6 p.m. Please be there for we will leave on time. Some are coming back Sunday, others Monday and Tuesday.

Frog season opens June 15th and concludes on August 31st. Daily limit and possession limit is eight. Channel cat are hitting at Anderson Lake on dew worms and leachers. White and largemouth bass are hitting at Shelbyville. Otter Lake has been good for bass 2-3 lb. class. Yeager at Litchfield has also been good fishing.

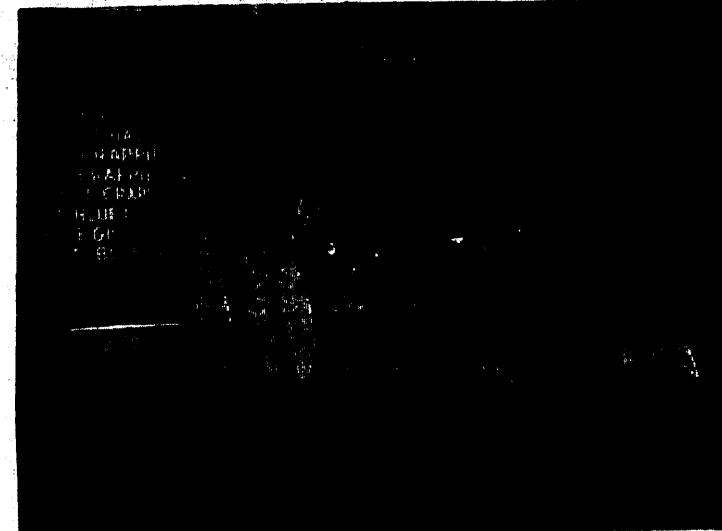

Bring your catches to D and D SPORTS CENTER for prizes and pictures.

LAKE FISHERMEN

For Morris Boutin of Bayside, Wis., hauling in the nets is backbreaking work—but worth it when the catch is good.

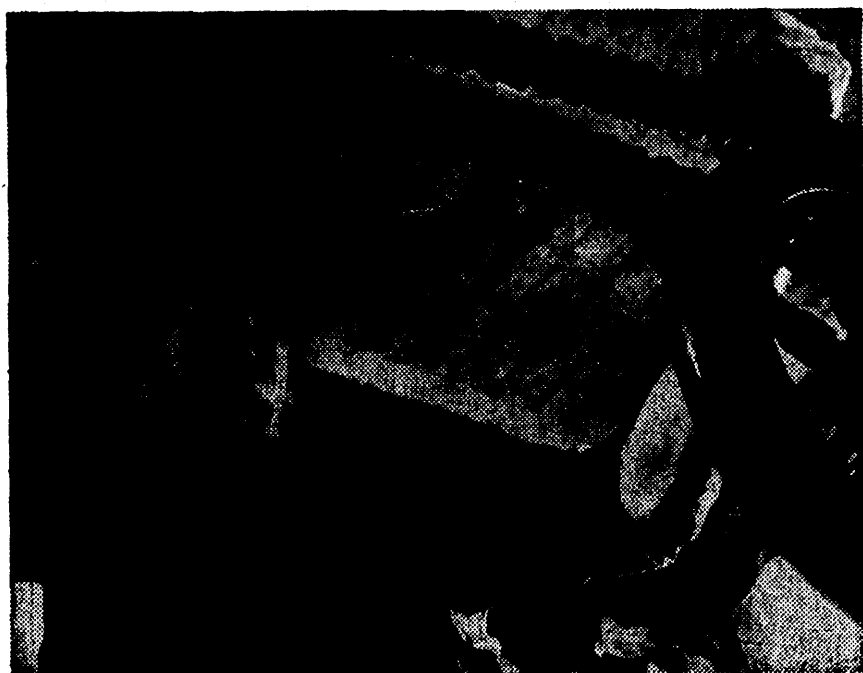

Fishermen wait out a summer squall on Lake Superior.

There are more fish than ever these days in Lake Superior. But there are only a few commercial fishermen left—those working out of Bayside, Wis., for example. Some of the fishermen are getting old now, and have no one to carry on the business when they retire. It's not an easy way of life. Rising costs make it more difficult to earn a living. Increasing numbers of sport fishermen are out on the lakes. And for a fisherman, conservation means you have to throw back the fancy lake trout. That's why the younger men say they want no part of fishing. But there are still the older men who don't think of changing and won't give up until they retire. "It's all I know. I was born into it. I like it. I have it in my blood," says one who won't quit.

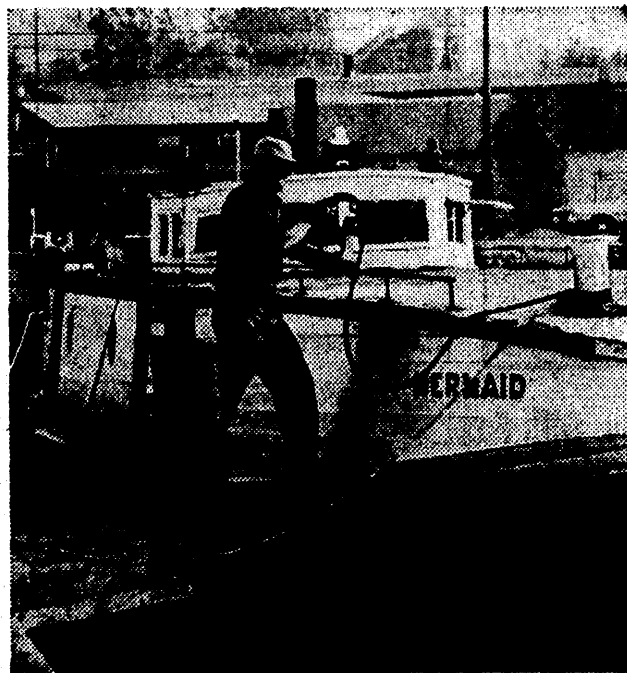

Photographed by Paul Shane.

Conservation requirements affect fishermen: fancy lake trout have to be thrown back.

When weather is bad, or after setting other nets, Allison Boutin, left, and his son, Ronnie, repair nets on quayside.

One of the good days: the packed boxes of whitefish are heaved with a winch.

ARREST JAPANESE TERRORIST WANTED IN MASSACRE CASE

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese police Friday arrested a young man wanted in connection with the Tel Aviv airport massacre in which 26 persons died and more than 70 were wounded.

Takeo Himori, 24, a former student at a Kyoto university, was arrested in a pawnshop as he claimed a watch he pawned May 22.

The police say Himori is one of five Japanese terrorists who plotted the massacre May 30. Two were killed during the attack, one was captured by the Israelis, and the fifth, Osamu Maruoka, 21, is sought in Japan and Europe.

Police said they will question Himori about an underground Arab guerrilla organization in Japan which Kozo Okamoto, 24, the other captive terrorist, reportedly described to Israeli authorities. The police said Himori may also have information on the activities of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine in Japan.

The right-hander pitched out of a jam in the ninth inning by feeding Leroy Stanton a double-play pitch after California put men on first and third with one out.

The Cleveland starter was given his onne-run lead when Ray Fosse singled off Clyde Wright, 6-3, after two were out in the fourth. Nettles then followed with his double to right. MONEY CLIPS by Mort Reed

'Going Once
-- Twice --
Sold At $29,000'

When the auctioneer's hammer rapped for the last time during the sale of armand Champ's famous rare and scarce coin collection last month, new record-breaking prices had been set for some already highly valued specimens of United States coins. The two-day sale surpassed all expectations in competitive floor bidding.

Of particular interest was an exciting moment during the disposition of United States gold specimens. The coin on the block was the beautiful and extremely rare (only 10 were ever struck) 1879 coiled hair $4 gold Stella, a goldoid composition struck as a pattern piece only in 1879 and 1880.

The first bid of $23,000, was submitted through the mail, and announced by the auctioneer. This prompted a floor bid of $24,000, and it was obvious that from there on the sky would be the limit.

The $24,000 offer was immediately followed by two offers of $26,000, $27,000 was bid from the floor only to followed by a shout of $28,000. Just when everything was beginning to quiet down, an offer of $29,000 was made by a dealer who had traveled a very long distance just to acquire this individual piece. After two warnings at $29,000 the bidding closed on the $4 gold Stella, and an entirely new trend had been set in gold marked values.

A superb Uncirculated specimen of an 1876-CC (Carson City) 20 cent piece once owned by the noted composer Jerome Kern, brought an immediate floor bid of $24,000, without any urging from the auctioneer. Only 10,000 pieces of this particular date were struck in Carson City, and while this only 5,000 less than the number struck in 1876 at Philadelphia, the difference of $23,800 in value may be attributed to most of the CC specimens being unaccounted for.

Information on this and all future sales to be conducted by the American Auction Association, may be obtained by writing Mr. James F. Ruddy, American Auction Association, Suite 810, 6922 Hollywood, Boulevard, Hollywood, California 90028.

HUMOR IN LAW

VANCOUVER (AP) — Goughing humor out of the law is like digging for gold—tough but rewarding, says David Huberman, professor of law at the University of British Columbia.

He's devoted years to sifting out what little humor there is in the mills of justice and plans to write a book about it.

At one time he was chairman of admissions to the UBC law faculty and he recalled a couple of answers to admission questions, turned in by law students and student accountants.

Question: Define union check-off dues.

Answer: "A famous European author."

Question: "Define a quorum."

Answers: "A place for crushing rock." "A place where the Romans used to sacrifice the Christians." "For a quorum, the directors have to be odd."

"If you really want to laugh," he said, "you'd better remember that some of these people might be your lawyers, your accountants."

Huberman also has a file devoted to letters addressed to lawyers. One says: "Thank you for offering to represent me in court, but I don't need a lawyer. I'm going to tell the truth."

Civilian departments of the U.S. Government use about 216,000 motor vehicles, while the Defense Department uses more than 190,000.

President Lincoln was shot on April 14, 1865 and died on the 15th.

RICHARD CASTELLANO is Joe Girelli, "The Super," in the new summer series premiering on ABC 7-7:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 21. Joe is the superintendent of a small tenement-type apartment house in New York—viewers will meet his family, his friends, his tenants and his enemies on the comedy half-hour.

William Conrad, who plays the title role in "Cannon" on the CBS Television Network, was a fighter pilot in World War II.

ATTORNEY OWEN MARSHALL (Arthur Hill) plans to put on the stand Daryl Williamson (William Schallert) father of a boy charged with assault and attempted homicide, in "Voice from a Nightmare" on ABC's "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" 9-10 p.m. Thursday, June 22.

GABRIEL DELL stars as bartender Harry Grant in the new summer comedy series, "The corner Bar," premiering on ABC 7:30-8 p.m. Wednesday, June 21.

IT'S NOW "HIS HONOR" BILL CONRAD

In his long and diverse career William Conrad has worn many hats—radio, television and motion picture actor, director, producer, radio-television voice on commercials, wartime flyer, yachtsman, deep-sea fisherman and expert marksman.

Now the popular private eye of the "Cannon" series, seen Tuesdays (8:30-9:30 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network, has added the distinctive top of a mayor. Recently, the actor was named honorary mayor of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

In that unofficial post he succeeds two other distinguished citizens of the community—Los Angeles Rams coach Tommy Prothro and comedian Steve Allen.

AND ABLE

Doug McClure, who worked for Leslie Stevens in "The Virginian" series, is again working for Stevens, executive producer and creator of NBS-TV's new "Probe" series, which premieres Sept. 13. "I ran into Leslie and said I was free in April," said McClure, whose contract with Universal expired after 15 years. "He said, 'We could use you.' I'm glad I was wanted."

Dies Of Heart Attack

SPRINGFIELD (UPI)—State Rep. Elmo McClain, D-Quincy, died late Thursday night in St. John's Hospital here after suffering a heart attack on the House floor earlier Thursday.

McClain, 54, who was seeking re-election to a fifth term, collapsed on the House floor shortly after voting on the equal rights amendment.

The House nurse administered oxygen to McClain on the floor of the House and Rep. Bruce Douglas, D-Chicago, a doctor, checked McClain's blood pressure and pulse before an ambulance arrived and took the stricken legislator to the hospital.

Acquaintances of McClain said he had no heart condition to their knowledge but that he had not been feeling well recently.

At the hospital, McClain was first listed in fair condition but apparently improved and was later listed in satisfactory condition. A hospital spokesman said McClain died at 11:17 p.m. McClain represented the 49th Congressional District, which includes Morgan County, before reapportionment moved him into the 50th District. The personable legislator was well-known in the Jacksonville area and was a frequent visitor to the city. McClain was a long-time coach at Quincy Catholic Boys School and served as athletic director there.

Mayor Dan Lahey, who was Democratic County Chairman during McClain's legislative career in this district, expressed a sense of "personal loss" at McClain's death.

Born Aug. 4, 1917, McClain was a graduate of Quincy Academy, Quincy College and held a master's degree in education from Western Illinois University in Macomb.

Funeral services for Rep. McClain will be at 11:30 a.m. Monday at the Haugh and Son Funeral Home in Quincy and at 12 noon at the St. Peter's Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Peter's cemetery.

Visitation will be Sunday afternoon and evening; and Monday until time of services at the funeral home. The rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. Sunday. The family asks consideration of memorials to the McLean Children's Scholarship Fund.
